Times News Services

TORONTO — RCMP security forces are close to uncovering several other Soviet spies believed connected to a major spy ring of between 40 and 50 agents operating out of a trade mission in Metropolitan Toronto.

The Soviet spy ring uncovered by the RCMP represents only a portion of Soviet agents operating in Canada, according to police sources quoted by the Globe and Mail.

The newspaper quotes its informants as saying there are hundreds of agents in Canada who are paid to provide information to Soviet agents.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, officially denied today that its 11 diplomats expelled from Canada had been guilty of any "impermissible activities" and accused Canadian authorities of plotting to damage Soviet-Canadian relations.

The Soviet denial came in an official statement by the news agency Tass, which carries the weight of a government announcement.

Tass accused opponents of detente in Canada of stepping up in recent times an anti-Soviet "campaign," backed by Canada's "special services," presumably intelligence agencies.

Officials of the Soviet embassy in Ottawa say the expulsions will divert attention from what they say are Canada's internal problems and make life easier for the RCMP.

"Canada and America can't live without us," said press officer Victor Mikheev. "When they can't put in order their own internal affairs they have to have an outlet."

Another press officer, Igor Lobanov, said the charges of spying "are laughable accusations."

Asked why Canada would risk harming relations between the two countries if the charges were not true, he replied "it will make easier the life of the RCMP now. They will get good press coverage from now on."

Prime Minister Trudeau, however, said today that the incident will not stop Canada from cultivating good relations with the Soviet Union.

"No doubt it will be made more difficult by the discovery of the spy ring but I don't see it as the end of our relations in any sense," the prime minister said at a news conference.

"Naturally the discovery of the spy ring is a disturbing thing to friendship," the prime minister said.

He regretted this but it should not stop the two countries from seeking good relations in the cultural and economic fields.

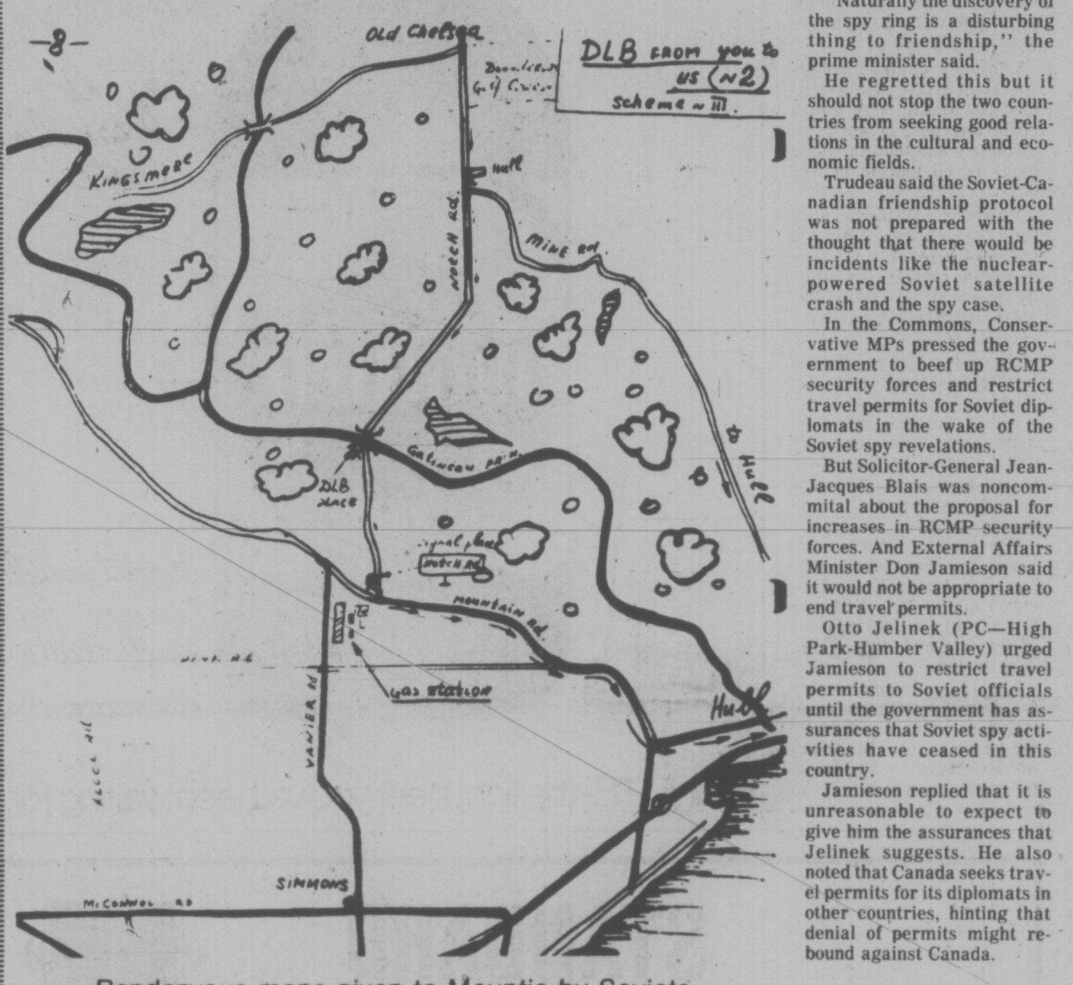
Trudeau said the Soviet-Canadian friendship protocol was not prepared with the thought that there would be incidents like the nuclear-powered Soviet satellite crash and the spy case.

In the Commons, Conservative MPs pressed the government to beef up RCMP security forces and restrict travel permits for Soviet diplomats in the wake of the Soviet spy revelations.

But Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais was noncommital about the proposal for increases in RCMP security forces. And External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said it would not be appropriate to end travel permits.

Otto Jelinek (PC—High Park-Humber Valley) urged Jamieson to restrict travel permits to Soviet officials until the government has assurances that Soviet spy activities have ceased in this country.

Jamieson replied that it is unreasonable to expect to give him the assurances that Jelinek suggests. He also noted that Canada seeks travel permits for its diplomats in other countries, hinting that denial of permits might rebound against Canada.



Rendezvous maps given to Mountie by Soviets

★ Some Pretty Sneaky Tricks

OTTAWA (UPI) — James Bond had nothing on the Soviets.

In fact, even the producer of a grade-B movie would be hard-pressed to top some of the gimmicks the Soviets came up with for their Canadian spy network.

Among the cloak-and-dagger methods used by the Soviets were Coca-Cola can letter boxes, hollow sticks and a modified Marlboro cigarette package to pass messages and film, orange peels to signal delivery and colored tape stuck to a pillar at a local shopping centre to arrange meetings.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police agent who broke the ring by pretending to pass on classified information also received ridiculously detailed hand-drawn maps showing him rendezvous points.

RCMP copies of handwritten Soviet documents show that one complex set of signals used colored tapes stuck to the first pillar of the arcade in a suburban Ottawa shopping centre.

"Black Color — call for the instant meeting.

"Red Color — call to stop any operations."

Another document called for a meeting at Old Chelsea in the Gatineau Park 15 miles from Ottawa. The RCMP double agent was to park his car and wait for a contact to say: "Can you show me the way to Pink Lake?" He was to answer: "Sorry, I know Pink Lake, but in Ontario Province."

A document outlining how to use a drop code called DLB No. 2 describes a woody country road and a bridge. "Put the container beside the last abutment of the bridge on your right side (see the scheme IV). Use a Coca-Cola tin as a container.

"Signals: to let us know that you 'put the container in,' place an orange peel beside the sign, 'Notch Road' . . . put a peel so that it could be seen from a driving car."

TWO DEAD IN L.A.

Flash Flood, Tornado, Rains Lash S. California

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — A furious wind and rain storm, including a tornado, lashed rain-soaked Southern California Thursday night and early today, unleashing flash floods that swept away autos, burst at least one small dam and caused widespread damage and some deaths.

Police activated the emergency command post in the city hall basement for the first time since it was set up several years ago and a fire department spokesman called the situation "very grave."

Police said there were at least two known deaths in the city proper, including a man drowned by a wall of water that struck his car in West Los Angeles.

Elsewhere a teen-ager was swept to his death in a flood-swollen stream.

Thousands of homes and businesses were in darkness for up to several hours after rain and wind combined to knock out power from Santa Barbara to San Diego.

The Los Angeles police department called a tactical alert during the night, requiring all personnel to remain on duty to handle dozens of emergency calls about mudslides, downed live wires, power outages and flash floods.

"Someone in our apartment building took the elevator down to the basement and brought 150 gallons of water back up into the lobby," said George Baron, 38, of West Hollywood. "The water just gushed in when the doors opened. Seven units in our building are ruined, the water came down the alley and gushed in through the door jams."

A tornado lashed El Segundo. Police reported flash floods in mountain and canyon areas and water coursing six feet deep through the streets of Hollywood. A dam collapsed in Big Tujunga canyon, pouring a wall of water down into the residential area below.

A city fire department spokesman said "the extent of damage is not yet known, but we're trying to evacuate the area — there are so many things happening throughout the city, but that's the worst problem we have now."

"The streets are impassable. There are cars piles up in heaps of three or four, mixed in with mud about 18 inches deep and boulders," said reporter Jeff Wilson, who lives in the canyon.

"The power is out all over, and in the dark and confusion it's hard to tell what's going on, but one of my neighbors said another van just floated past."

Police in Montebello said they were using boats to reach stranded motorists

QUEBEC TAKES CHALLENGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec rugby team has accepted a challenge issued Wednesday at a hearing of the Task Force on Canadian Unity.

"Anytime — we're all for it", Dave Hardy, secretary of the Ormstown Saracens, said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Second row forward Gordon Stewart of Surrey Beavers Rugby Club suggested Wednesday a rugby game be played between "any Quebec rugby club and our club as a solution to the Canadian dilemma of duality."

Let there be two 40-minute halves played under Canadian Rugby Union rules, he said, with a bilingual impartial referee. Afterwards, both teams would head for the closest watering hole where the second battle would take place — a beer-drinking contest.

Tel Wind-Up Confusion

The B.C. Telephone contract dispute appears to be grinding toward a weekend settlement but in the meantime both sides are locked in a confusing battle over return-to-work conditions.

The latest skirmish, bringing union charges that the company is deliberately blocking the workers' return, stems from a B.C. Tel demand that employees sign a four-point interim agreement if they want to go back to work immediately.

Company spokesman Keith Mathews said today the agreement will only have to be signed by the returning employees until the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union has ratified a tentative three-year contract.

The ratification process began Wednesday night and is expected to be completed by Sunday.

The union says the company is going to make the employees sign the interim four-point agreement until the collective agreement is approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board, a process that could take up to two months.

"Nobody is going to sign that thing," TWU spokesman Chris Anderson said today.

The union has been given legal advice to the effect that individual employees are not allowed, under the terms of the Canada Labor Code, to sign individual contracts with the company, he said.

He said the interim agreement is just another vindictive move by the company to "try to teach our people a lesson for going out in the first place."

The interim agreement states that if an employee

CALGARY (CP) — A 25-year-old heroin addict who imported an estimated $268,000 worth of the drug into Canada from Thailand was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in jail.

Jobless No Disaster Grit Report Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs are hopping mad over a document prepared by the employment and immigration department for circulation among Liberal MPs.

It states that although 8.3 per cent of the national work force is jobless, unemployment no longer represents a financial disaster.

The document, made public today by the Progressive Conservative Opposition, says that although unemployment is at its highest level since the 1930s, the problems are not as great as during the Depression because of unemployment insurance and welfare programs.

The Opposition expressed anger at what it called a scurrilous document and attacked the Liberal government in the Commons for failing to find solutions to unemployment.

The major conclusion of the 14-page document was: "We have got no perfect answers to the unemployment problems facing Canada."

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said the government is trying to con the nation by saying unemployment is not a financial disaster when 37 per cent of the unemployed have been jobless for three months and one-half of the unemployed no longer can collect insurance benefits.

Once unemployment insurance benefits were dried up, persons were forced to take welfare.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen retorted that the Newfoundland MP was the con artist for using misleading figures.

Only four per cent of persons whose insurance benefits were exhausted were forced onto welfare.

The document calls the unemployment insurance program "well-conceived and administered."

McGrath said if that statement was true, why had the government initiated a $1 million advertising campaign to warn the public against abusing the program.

Cullen did not reply to that question.

Braefoot: Big Winners . . . Big Losers

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

As suburban blacktopped Saanich creeps remorselessly outward to devour another tract of fields and open spaces on the semi-rural fringes, a real estate bonanza worth millions of dollars is in the offing.

But among the land speculators and retirement nest-egg hoarders involved in the latest area earmarked for development there will be big winners, much smaller winners and also some losers.

Which resident ends up in which category ultimately rests on the map lines drawn by the planners, and the arbitrary decisions of elected officials, acting in what they see to be the best interests of the community.

At a public hearing Thursday night, designed to obtain residents' reaction to a draft plan for the Braefoot area, Saanich planner Dave Harper pointed out that the municipal officials will be cast in the role of referees.

He also said the distinction between the lucky residents and the not-so-lucky ones could be likened to the wayward fortunes of a blindfold darts game:

"If your dart was a lucky one and you bought a parcel in the right area 20 years ago, you stand to make a capital gain."

The public unveiling of the municipality's so-called Braefoot Area Study indicates that if the paper concept becomes reality a process of profound change is about to overtake one of the more attractive districts of rural Saanich.

Bounded roughly by Braefoot, Glendinning, Cedar Hill Road and McKenzie, its northern boundary nestling beneath the lower slopes of Mount Douglas Park, the 125-acre area of gently rolling land is a mixture of hobby farms, large residential lots and undeveloped land covered by native vegetation.

Facing development pressure both within the area (residents petitioning the municipality for sewers) and outside, Saanich planners foresee that this pastoral enclave's future lies in subdivision.

This will transform it into "a traditional single-family neighborhood" with a low-density mixture of housing including single-home lots, duplexes and small, scattered clusters of townhouses.

What is now an area of 62 homes accommodating about 200 residents will, under the draft plan, have the potential to become nearly 400 residential units housing more than 1,200 people.

If municipal officials were expecting some sort of majority view to emerge from Thursday night's meeting they didn't get it, for the reactions generally fell into three groups.

Those supporting the plan were mostly residents who will be able to subdivide their properties into 7,200 and 8,400-square-foot lots. (In the former category, with a potential for up to five lots per acre, some larger holdings of 10 acres or more stand to receive the greatest financial gain).

Some criticizing it were owners of properties on the western edge of the area, between Malton and Braefoot, who will be limited to one-acre lots because they are seen as a buffer between the

Bitter Brief by B.C. French

DEPRIVED OF RIGHTS

VANCOUVER (CP) - Bitter French-Canadians of B.C. Thursday told the touring Task Force on Canadian Unity that equality between the cultures is a myth.

Thursday's public forum saw 46 speakers raise a range of concerns already familiar to the study group's members. Many supported the group's work but others repeated charges that questions of inflation and unemployment were more important.

Severeil Gaudet, president of the Federation Jeunesse Colombienne, said she is "disappointed, discouraged, disillusioned, tired, misunderstood, confused, deprived of rights—of fundamental rights—the right to be respected as a French-Canadian in this country."

Gaudet's brief said that all has been said and repeated with respect to the problems of Canadian unity and there was little new that could be added.

"What have you learned with our $3 million? With the $3 million that this commission is spending we could establish a French education system, we could have solved many problems."

Two members of the task force voiced fears for a confused and divided country they have seen during their hearings.

Solange Chaput-Rolland, one of three Quebec representatives, told 150 persons that during the tour of 12 cities in 10 provinces she had asked herself: "'Are we living in the same country?"

Her conclusion: "I don't believe so."

As she began to speak, switching easily from French to English and back in the same sentence, a voice from the audience shouted, "Speak English."

"I will speak as I wish," Mrs. Chaput-Rolland snapped back.

"We must protect this country that has perhaps the greatest freedoms in the world. One of those is to speak my language."

During her trip, she said, she had looked for a country, "and found a geography, a territory so beautiful and rich that changes four times a year."

"And I found Canadians that are afraid to change once in 400 years."

Mrs. Chaput-Rolland rejected criticisms the hearings are a fraud and waste of money.

"I understood one thing — whatever the city, whatever the boos and hisses — that all the time I was prouder to be on this side of the table with them than on that side with some of you."

A third option — a course for Canada between separation and refusal to change — rests with the people, she said. The job of the task force will be to find "that vision of long ago that two peoples met to create."

Muriel Kovitz, one of the group's two Western members and chancellor of the University of Calgary, said her experience on the inquiry had convinced her that the question Canadians must ask themselves is, "Do we accept the binational nature of this country?"

"Until we come to grips with this, our efforts will only be a papering over of a Canadian crisis.

"Our task to propose solutions is not going to be easy. We never really thought it would. But we intend to try, to give it a valiant effort."

Weary after what she said had been a 16-hour day, Mrs. Kovitz complained that from some reports "one would guess that we on the task force are only engaged in consuming time."

"We are not looking for a way to spend time. We are facing a crisis in this country. It will not go away if we forget about it."

News coverage of the hearings often leave her wondering if she and the reporters attended the same meeting, she said. "One of the biggest games in this country seem to me is stick it to, give it to, get the task force."

A strong homespun plea for one Canada was made by Bill Wilson, president of the United Native Nations.

"The Indian people believed that the people got their strength from mother earth," said Wilson, spokesman for the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia and the United Native Nations.

"By slicing her up, it will only serve to weaken her and the people who are dependent on her for strength."

Wilson was among a group of Indian speakers—the last group spokesman appearing before the task force during its second day of a two-day West Coast visit.

Briefcase Full of Cash a Tip-Off

TORONTO (CP) — A bank robbery suspect was arrested Wednesday at Toronto International Airport after an airline clerk became suspicious when a man paid for a flight ticket from a briefcase overflowing with money.

Police said the clerk notified airport security officers after the man bought a $2,100 ticket to the Orient and Australia with $100 bills.

Police said Thursday that Anthony Wayne Harding, 29, of Vancouver has been charged with the armed robbery earlier this week of $14,000 from a Toronto Dominion Bank.

BRAEFOOT PLAN LOSS FOR SOME

new suburban development and the agricultural lands of the Blenkinsop Valley to the west.

And yet other opponents of the plan were those residents who simply wanted the Braefoot area left the way it is.

Typical of those in the last group was the elderly woman whose contribution to the evening was a simple 12-word sentence: "I want Glendinning left in the greenbelt, frozen, and left in peace . . . okay?"

There were also echoes of the philosophical arguments raised following the former NDP government's farmland freeze five years ago, on the property rights of the individual vis-a-vis those of the community as a whole.

George Wood, 4079 Braefoot, who complained that he would suffer a substantial loss from the one-acre designation, said while the plan may be environmentally sound it is an unfair imposition on certain residents.

"If there is something in the community that is socially necessary or desirable, let society go ahead and purchase it," he said. "Then you can do with it what you damn well want to do.

"But don't ask me to subsidize the community."

The 200 residents who attended were assured that the plan is still at a tentative stage and that it will be refined and adapted over the next few months.

Of the 125 acres, 101 will be serviced by sanitary sewers, but this won't happen for at least a year, they were told.

returns to work, he or she must:

— Work alongside management;

— Work the minimum number of hours, either seven or 7½ hours a day depending on the shift;

— Accept 1976 pay rates until a contract is signed;

— Not participate in any practice that would hurt service, such as requesting time off.

There are also signs that there could be a confrontation on Monday, the day the employees are expected to go back to work.

The TWU's position still is that all the employees will return to the same shifts they left when rotating strikes and lockouts erupted into a full-fledged strike Nov. 24.

B.C. Tel says it is impossible to have a complete return to work and that the process will have to be phased in over a period of up to five days.

The company's reasoning is that some supervisors, who have to assign work, are away from their home office doing work normally done by the employees.

Mathews said employees will be contacted Sunday and told what date they should return to work and what shift they will be on.

Both sides agreed to the tentative agreement, which is retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977, a week ago, but five days of intensive negotiations failed to produce a back-to-work agreement.

Another meeting on the matter was scheduled for today with federal mediator Mike Collins but Collins withdrew from the dispute Thursday because he said the union no longer wanted to participate in the talks.

Company chairman Gordon MacFarlane said Thursday the employees could begin returning to work immediately and that all would likely be on the job in five days.

However, Mathews said today he expected only a trickle of workers to return before the contract is ratified by the union. He said he has not heard whether any have yet done so.

He said it appears the return-to-work won't start until Monday.

Union president Bob Donnelly said no union members will be going back to work before they have all had a chance to vote on the proposed contract.

The tentative agreement, based on recommendations from Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court, calls for wage inreases of six, four and six per cent over the three years.

The judge recommended the thorny question of contracting-out be handled by the formation of a joint committee headed by an impartial chairman with powers to make binding decisions.

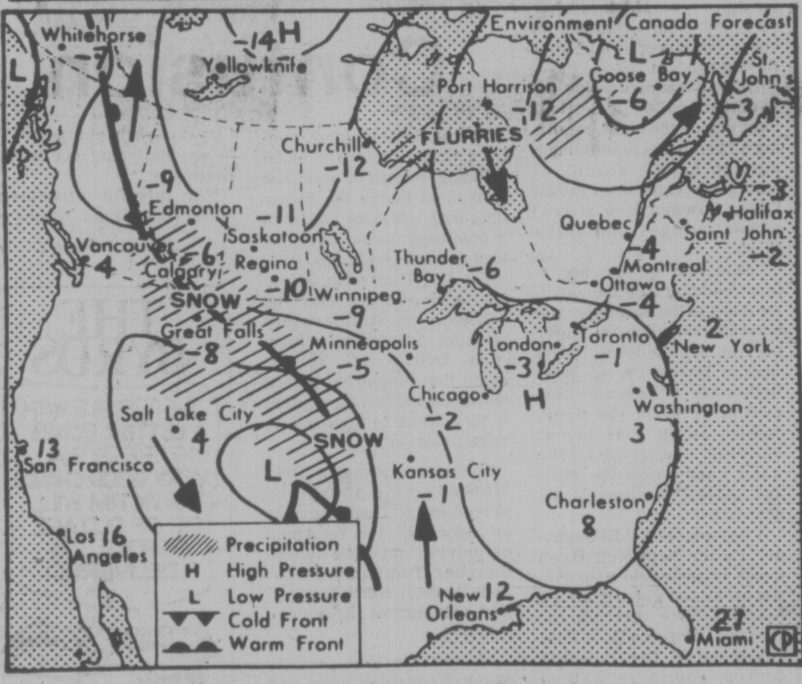

Map valid until noon Saturday.

The storm in the Gulf of Alaska is weakening gradually. Unstable cooler air has followed in its wake along the B.C. coast resulting in a few showers of rain or wet snow on the North coast and mainly on the west coast of northern Vancouver Island. Today this weather will continue with a gradual improving trend over these areas on Saturday. On the inner south coast mainly sunny skies will prevail on both days. At the same time over the interior much cloudiness will prevail with a few flurries except over the Thompson and Okanagan regions where sunny periods will occur at times. Over the extreme northeast skies will remain mainly sunny today and again Saturday.

ENVIRONMENT CANADA WEATHER OFFICE 10 A.M. FORECASTS

Valid Until Midnight Saturday

Greater Victoria: Today and Saturday sunny with cloudy periods. Highs both days near 6. Lows tonight near zero.

Lower Mainland, East Vancouver Island: Today and Saturday sunny with cloudy periods. Highs both days near 6 except near 3 eastern Fraser Valley. Lows tonight near freezing.

North and West Vancouver Island: Today cloudy with a few showers of rain or wet snow. Chance of a thundershower. Saturday mainly cloudy. Highs both days 4 to 6. Lows tonight near zero.

U.S. FLU DEATH TOLL 3,000 IN ONE MONTH

ATLANTA (AP) — Medical experts here have confirmed what half-empty office buildings around the country have been witness to for the last month — that the flu has reached epidemic proportions in the United States.

The U.S. National Centre for Disease Control reported that there have been more than 3,000 deaths attributed to influenza and pneumonia in the U.S. in the last four weeks, 1,000 more than were expected.

On the basis of those figures, the centre said Thursday it has concluded that influenza has reached epidemic proportions.

Centre officials said most of the damage is being done by older strains of the virus, although cases of the new Russian flu have been reported in Wyoming, Colorado, Michigan, Texas and New York.

Other viruses, including the more familiar A-Texas and A-Victoria strains, have been reported in practically every state, the centre said.

Centre offcial Don Berreth said the Russian flu has not been connected with any deaths. That strain, which surfaced in the Soviet Union and in Hong Kong last December, is not considered more severe than other strains.

$½M Fine For False STP Ads

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the biggest false advertisement settlement on record, the STP Corp. was fined half a million dollars Thursday, and agreed to retract published claims its oil treatment reduced oil consumption by up to 20 per cent.

The settlement was approved by a New York federal court and announced by the U.S. federal trade commission. The company agreed to publish notices in newspapers and magazines to inform the public the road tests on which it based its ad claims were unreliable.

Commission official Albert Kramer said the settlement was significant because "in certain cases it is no longer sufficient for an advertiser simply to stop making deceptive advertising claims and 'go and sin no more.'

The settlement followed a complaint filed by the FTC alleging that STP violated a previous commission order issued in 1976 against false advertising.

Economy Recovery: The First Step. . .

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers cluster here for three days next week in a summit meeting that some federal officials say will be the first step on the road to economic recovery for Canada.

Much is being made of the fact that, unlike most other meetings of this kind, the Monday-to-Wednesday gathering is open to the press. Most of the actual hard-nosed discussion, however is expected to take place at two private dinners and a luncheon.

"There should be little or no discussion about the immediate future or even the short-term," one federal official said Thursday.

There has been criticism that the federal government engineered next week's conference with a view to the general election many people have been forecasting for this summer. The feeling is that the Liberals, by putting the onus on the premiers to bury their differences in the battle to save the floundering economy, can blame the provincial governments if a consensus isn't reached. On the other hand, if they do succeed. Ottawa can take credit for getting all the premiers together.

The B.C. government feels the economic summit will be a failure unless a specific mechanism to implement any federal-provincial agreement is set up, a B.C. government spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said B.C. will be presenting the conference with broad recommendations on what can be done to improve the economy, and with a proposal for implementation.

"B.C. is not going to this conference . . . just to present a B.C. position," he said.

"It's a total package of an economic strategy for Canada . . . and it covers the broad elements."

The spokesman would not disclose any details of the B.C. proposals.

He said the position paper will be distributed to the news media here and in Ottawa on Sunday, but won't be made public until Monday morning when the three-day conference begins.

CO-ED PRISONS URGED FOR B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — It might be preferable to allow men and women to live together in prisons rather than allow homosexuality to be the norm, the commissioner of British Columbia corrections services said Thursday.

John Ekstedt told a B.C. inquiry into conditions in women's jails in the province that society should not accept with indifference the destructive impact of rampant homosexuality in segregated prisons.

He said outside the inquiry he was theorizing and not repeating policy of the attorney-general's ministry.

Ekstedt said segregation of the sexes in prisons creates "an environment that is at least unnatural enough to create new lifestyles in people."

Homosexuality adopted in prison is as damaging to prisoners as the offence that put them there, he said.

Mixing men and women at the Prince George jail "hasn't been shown to defeat the notion that co-ed prisons could be useful."

At the Prince George jail, holding hands and other physical contact between men and women is prohibited but men and women are together for recreational and other programs.

Ekstedt told the inquiry the ministry should "provide an appropriate trial" for co-ed jails because a heterosexual environment for prisoners "is not a bad idea and worth thinking about further."

Back to Bewley's Battle

Some people just don't know when to stop fighting. They win a victory, even a partial victory, and, instead of accepting it with a sigh of relief, turn back immediately to battle.

One of those people obviously is Provincial Court Judge Les Bewley. The Judicial Council investigated statements Bewley made during a sentencing hearing, concluded they weren't the best sort of statements for a judge to make, but recommended that no further action be taken against Bewley.

One would think Bewley would be glad of the verdict. But not a bit of it. Now he has written a formal letter of complaint to the B.C. Provincial Court Judges Association, protesting the actions of Chief Judge Lawrence Brahan and Associate Chief Judge Lawrence Goulet in their initial investigation of complaints made about the statements.

Just what Bewley expects the BCPCJA to do about his gripes isn't clear. The association has traditionally seen its main job as maintaining liaison between judges, providing continuing education seminars and courses for them, and working to improve court procedures. It has never stepped into the realm of the political or quasi-political, and it certainly doesn't want to do so now.

It has never taken any power to deal with feuds among its member judges. There is nothing in its bylaws to say it can censure or discipline anyone, nor any procedures laid down if it wished to do so.

Whatever powers there are in B.C. law to deal with improper behavior by provincial court judges lie, according to the Provincial Court Act, with . . . that's right, the Judicial Council, headed by Brahan and with Goulet as vice-chairman.

Through his letter to BCPCJA, Bewley is, in effect, challenging the entire system of handling complaints about judges. That's a huge enemy to take on, particularly when the council has just rapped his knuckles. Many other judges, and certainly many members of the public, are bound to think Bewley is acting out of a spirit of revenge, rather than one of rational concern about the current system.

Nonetheless, the Bewley affair has raised some important questions about the Judicial Council, questions that deserve serious examination by the judges, the government and the public at large. The council in its present form has now been in place about two years, and it is well time to see if the legislation establishing it is working as it was planned.

In the aftermath of the Bewley investigation, many people are suggesting that the act should be tightened up and made more specific concerning the powers of the chief judge and the council, and the procedures they should use in dealing with complaints.

Some people, for example, think it unfair that the council should be able to chastise a judge publicly without recommending any action against him. This, they say, amounts to a minor form of discipline the council can impose. Such disciplinary action is neither specifically encouraged or outlawed in the act.

Others think that the chief judge and his associate should be subject to more stringent rules in their investigations to decide whether a formal inquiry is warranted in any particular case.

Still others think that the judges themselves should have a controlling majority on the council (which now is composed of the chief judge, the associate chief judge, one other judge, one justice of the peace, two lawyers and three ordinary citizens).

All these are important questions. They are too important to be left just to the judges and the politicians to decide. Since a competent and entirely independent judiciary remains a cornerstone of our democratic process, all citizens should be interested in the methods available to ensure that our judges meet those criteria.

Moreover, the questions should be decided in the calmest, most rational atmosphere possible — not in a climate dominated by the feelings stirred up by an individual case that involved the emotional issue of female stereotyping.

For Bewley to pursue his complaints now will not encourage the development of the necessary calm atmosphere. He should drop them, but at the same time, the attorney-general's ministry should reassure him that his concerns are being taken seriously and will be brought before the public, once everyone's tempers have cooled.

He Needn't Apologize

Defence Minister Barney Danson is apologetic about telling a Canadian disarmament organization that the Soviet Union would impose its will by armed might if political and economic means fail.

"Oh God, I don't know how that got through," he told The Canadian Press.

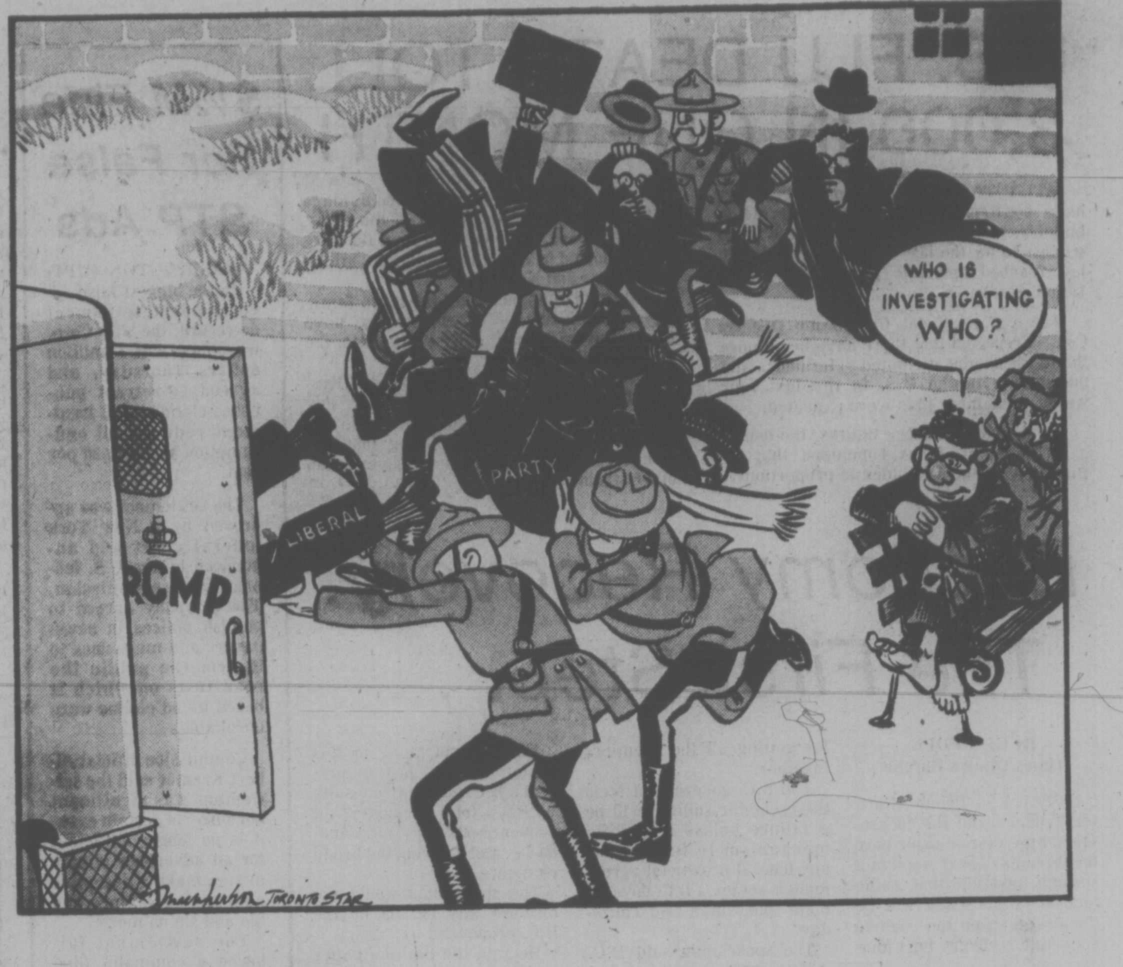
In the letter he had said that the principal problem with arms control was "how best to proceed in a world where . . . the Warsaw Pact, led by the Soviet Union, openly proclaims its policy to impose its political philosophy, if possible by peaceful means but, if necessary, by force."

He needn't apologize for stating the hard, cold facts of realpolitik.

What is inaccurate about telling Canadians that the Russians aim to impose their system by force if necessary? The Czechoslovakians found that out in 1968, the Hungarians in 1956. Numberless millions of Russians learned that if they couldn't be "persuaded" of the Soviet state's inarguable wisdom and supremacy, there were other ways of bringing them along.

Why is the minister retracting a perfectly accurate statement? Perhaps he is fearful of offending our neighbors across the north pole. That is a charitable explanation. Or perhaps he actually believes the Soviet Union, peace-loving government that it is, would never, never send its tanks across the Oder into western Europe — a version that suggests the federal Liberals really have taken leave of their senses.

Quiet diplomacy has its place, but there's no need to get down and grovel.



BRUCE HUTCHISON

Planet Continues to Turn

Before he ventured out of doors this morning the old countryman had read in the newspaper a striking dictum for Eric Hoffer, the longshoreman, philosopher and genial critic of humanity: "It is to the creative mind that a common occurrence can be as important as a momentous event."

The countryman's mind was not creative but it still worked in a clumsy fashion and he guessed that Hoffer's single sentence contained more truth than all the speeches of Parliament and the brooding meditations of Pierre Trudeau. Then, in the chilly woods, the truth appeared to be fully confirmed.

Feeble Chirp

No momentous event was visible but there were plenty of common occurrences — common to the mild Pacific coast if not yet elsewhere in Canada. Already the pendulous alder catkins wore the color of vintage burgundy, the first brave yellow sheaths of skunk cabbage had begun to unfold, the sun stood a little higher every day above the horizon and the daylight grew longer, if you cared to measure it.

By this evidence the countryman judged that the abused but reliable planet had turned again on its axis and steady rhythm, disregarding the erratic human timetable and fever chart. Common occurrences, yes, though seldom noticed, or buried under snow in most Canadian regions, but so momentous that if they paused for an instant the resulting ice age would be the least of mankind's embarrassments.

Instead of watching the normal round of things, however, popular attention was focused on some passing scandal, the seven-day wonder of a cabinet resignation not by any standard momentous, or an impending election that would change men but not much else very much. Men came and went with a brief gleam of reputation, a feeble chirp, like the hungry robins and bluejays flitting through the forest and leaving only silence behind them.

Here, the countryman guessed, was the underlying and unsolved dilemma of the process called politics as it tried to hold a thin veneer of order on the instinctive chaos of human affairs — the vague, illusive shadow line between the basis and the superficial, the permanent and temporary, the famous personalities and the nameless forces propelling them toward unknown ends.

That was especially Canada's dilemma and maybe a moment of sympathy should be spared for the puzzled politicians. If they confused the momentous with the common the electors usually are the same in their private lives at no risk of public examination, no need to defend themselves or explain anything. Political sins were writ large in durable ink, those of the ordinary citizen infrequently recorded, some of the worst crimes being secret and quite legal.

Mother Nature, the countryman supposed, found no such difficulties and made no awkward compromises in her daily business. It was open and candid for anyone to examine, and if humans chose to watch her at second hand on television, fearing the original reality as too cold, too hot, or altogether too frightening, she didn't care.

When scientists filled the atmosphere with nuclear poisons, dumped them on the clean Arctic barrens and later, perhaps later on a crowded metropolis, nature might be fatally wounded in one planet but she possessed billions of others. There the evolutionary scheme could be perfected at leisure, safe from interruption.

To her everything was a common occurrence, though human folly sometimes made it momentous, possibly terminal to mankind's civilization, a recent and rather dubious experiment.

Sounds of Summer

After these disjointed reflections the countryman undertook a harmless scientific experiment of his own. He lit a fire of brush, always difficult in a winter rain forest but manageable if you knew how and had stored enough dry kindling in the woodshed.

As it seemed to him the roaring flames, with their squeak, cackle and hum, reproduced in miniature the sounds of summer, the bird song, the insect buzz, the forest's wind music and its acrid perfume, reminding him of certain common events, momentous in his tiny affairs.

When the glowing ashes faded at the day's end he recalled Hoffer's dictum and wished that he had the creative mind to understand it. No matter, the buds were swelling on alder and willow, the roots were working deep down in the flooded soil and, hardly believable yet to freezing Canadians beyond the narrow Pacific rim, spring could not be far behind — the most common and momentous of all the year's events.

Callous Calder

Thank you for your editorial (Aid to Vietnam, Jan 26.) taking issue with Mr. Calder's remarks about not sending aid to the children of Vietnam. (The funds were allocated unanimously by all parties, including some current cabinet members, in the legislature in 1975.

Last year Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova criticized the current provincial government on this same issue. Last year a group of 12 organizations (including churches, relief and friendship societies) submitted briefs to the committee now chaired by Mr. Calder in an attempt to have the funds released. There was still no action forthcoming.

At one point, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy made a public statement to the effect that the government had no obligation to honor the legislation promising the money. To his credit Premier Bennett immediately contradicted his minister and admitted there was indeed a principle involved, and a moral and factual commitment to be fulfilled. Still no action was taken.

Now once again a Social Credit leader has differed with the head of his party on this issue. These disagreements on basic moral principles are disquieting.

What we do know is that the children still suffer from lack of food and medicine. We know that Mrs. Hitchmanova, the churches and other groups have recived opposing answers from the members and the head of the Social Credit party about the sending of the money. We know the money has not been used.

Finally, I am deeply disturbed that the citizens of Victoria, having shown their concern and generosity by oversubscribing to the USC appeal, have to accept the callousness and arrogance of a sorry lot of politicians who have temporarily been entrusted to carry out the will of the electorate.

And all the while the children suffer. — H. Hagbarth Sorenson, 1564 Gladstone Avenue.

Vietnam Aid

The editorial in the Times Jan. 26, Aid to Vietnam, was read with appreciation by our members.

It is a disgrace the B.C. government is taking so long to spend the $2.25 million voted unanimously in 1973 to provide medical aid to Vietnamese children.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova in her June, 1977 newsletter stated: "Since my return visit had again been arranged at the invitation of the Ministry of Health in Hanoi, I was able to visit a number of hospitals. How I wished you could have been at my side! Inside the buildings most traces of destruction have disappeared, but I was struck by the scarcity of equipment. If there is any left at all, it is so completely worn out from many, many years of daily use that it takes immense patience and great skill to still handle it effectively. But not once did I hear a single word of complaint and over and over again I was impressed by the beautiful courage of the doctors, the nurses and the patients, including little children."

Latest reports indicate there is great need for medicines for children, especially antibiotics, penicillin, quinine, vaccines and vitamins, as well as equipment for children's hospital wards and operating rooms and for artificial limbs.

Each time the government committee met with representatives of the Save the Children Fund, the Friends' Society (Quakers), UNICEF, Red Cross and the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, all well-recognized organizations, our members were hopeful steps would be taken to spend the money voted.

Hearing at first hand, as it must have, the great need for aid, the committee's delay in spending the money voted is heartless and unethical.

We agree with you, B.C. should honor its commitment to the children of Vietnam. — Victoria Chapter, Voice of Women.

Write On

Response to the course Write On being carried by the Times has far exceeded our initial enrolment estimates. At present 259 members of the community are officially registered. No doubt many other readers of the Times will follow weekly lessons without necessarily registering for written assignments.

E. Devlin, Director of Continuing Education, University of Victoria.

Immigration Woes

Friends of mine in Victoria wish to sponsor the wife's sister as a landed immigrant for the following reasons:

The wife suffers from a chronic heart condition which frequently causes her to retire to bed and makes her unable at all times to undertake any household tasks that cause her to tire.

These facts are vouched for by her physician who has supplied the family with a letter stating that she needs a permanent home aide.

The husband, while gainfully employed is not in the financial position to provide for his wife a paid household aide. Nevertheless he can afford to provide his sister-in-law with her room and board.

The sister-in-law has funds enough to provide herself with all other needs and is therefore not interested in obtaining other employment in Canada.

This lady has no dependents; her only immediate family is her ailing sister resident in Victoria. She does not propose to request entry to Canada for other family connections, and is therefore no threat to the employment situation of Canadians who are in need of work.

Her desire is to be a permanent aide to her sick sister and to spend the rest of their lives together looking after her and her family.

This lady has been in Canada now on an extended visitor's visa and has conducted herself so admirably that there can be no possibility that she would ever be an embarrassment or a burden to this country.

The ministers of external affairs and of immigration have made much of the government's commitment to unite families. Yet here are two sisters wishing to spend the rest of their lives together, who are being forced to live on opposite sides of the Atlantic for some bureaucratic reason which has not been explained to them.

The entire family live exemplary lives; the brother-in-law is a Second World War veteran who met his wife during his active service abroad for his country.

That this excellent prospective immigrant should be penalized to the extent of being made to return to Scotland; there to start immigration proceedings and pay her fare all over again if and when she is accepted, is surely unworthy of a country that prides itself on its humanity and respect for human rights and needs. What is more, the money saved if she could remain here could be better spent in Canada. — Mrs. D. W. Munro, Ottawa.

Metric Not So Good

This is in reply to R. Silver's letter about the metric system (Not World's End) in the Feb. 4 Times. This system is not as good as some would have us believe. True, it makes use of the decimal arrangement but at the same time it has a grave weakness in that hardly any of its basic units of measurement are founded on a practical concept. Apparently the savants that formulated it had their heads so far in the clouds that they had lost all touch with earthly matters.

For instance, has there ever been a more practical measurement of length than the foot? One using this measurement does not need to pack a measuring device around with him; he has it — and readily available too. No more practical and down-to-earth device for a unit of measure can be conceived. But no, the savants who set up the metric system thought they would have to devise something clever — finally getting around to "fractionizing" the earth's circumference. What has this to do with the everyday life of the man on the street?

The same can be said for several other basic units of measurement selected for the metric system. It is time the metric system was thrown in the ashcan along with, of course, our old, practical, down-to-earth, commmonsense system and that we devise a system incorporating the good of both. Actually, the chief thing wrong with the old system is that it lacks decimalization.

R. Silver says our monetary system is metric and no one complains about it. But what about our time system? It is anything but metric and I have heard little complaint about this. The savants missed an innings here. — A. C. Carder, 4950 Thunderbird Place.

A Generation of Blacks 'Destroyed'

By JOHN PICTON

WASHINGTON — Recently, a local company decided to hire a group of black men as temporary laborers to help in a community-action program.

Their foreman was a black who had urged the company to participate in the scheme.

This is what he says of the experience:

"Twelve of them didn't have Social Security cards and didn't know what they are. Several had nothing that could be used for identification and didn't realize they needed basic ID.

"They couldn't fill out application forms and seemed totally unfamiliar with routine procedures.

"The work wasn't hard; in fact, it was easy to finish it in five hours and go home, although we still paid them for eight hours.

"Yet, they could hardly get it done in a full shift. They didn't know how to organize the simplest tasks.

"I'd end up saying: 'Look, you're right-handed, right? So why don't you do it this way and move it over here so you don't have to keep going back. But first, take your coat off, okay.' "

The foreman explained that most of the youngsters had never had jobs where they had to accomplish specific tasks or to complete anything.

Hence, they had no sense of mission, no realization that the employer existed for any reason other than paying them.

Black leaders say such cases are commonplace throughout the United States and it is just one of many illustrations of the woes of facing Black Americans today.

According to the 1977 edition of the National Roster of Black Elected Officials, blacks — who comprise 11 per cent of the U.S. population — account for less than one per cent of the elected officials in the nation.

The unemployment rate among black teen-agers, 35.4 per cent in 1972, climbed to 39.3 per cent in 1976 and, during 1977, was as high as 45.4 per cent.

It has been established that the suicide rate among black men in Washington has risen dramatically in recent years — from 9.5 per 100,000 in 971 to 15.7 per 100,000, while the national average is about 12.6.

As recently as last October, 15 per cent of the black labor force was unemployed, compared with 6.1 per cent of the white.

And although the wide disparity between the median incomes of black and white families has narrowed since the civil-rights movement of the 1950s, the improvement has been at best marginal.

Ominously, the National Urban League, a black-oriented organization, warns: "The absence of violence that aroused and alarmed the nation a decade ago should not be interpreted as a sign that all is well in Black America."

Prof. Walter Williams of Temple University, a black who was brought up in the slums of Philadelphia, describes the plight of black teenagers as "desperately bad."

"We are in the process of destroying a whole generation," he says. "And we could be encouraging an explosion."

But, while he anticipates more violence and other forms of crime, he says he does not expect to see a repeat of past riots.

Bernard Anderson, associate professor of industry at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance, explains that a difference between blacks and whites is that white youths can take menial jobs knowing they eventually will move on to something better.

"A black kid sees his mother and father — all the people he knows — doing that kind of work.

"For him, it's not just a way station. That's his destination. So why hurry to get there?"

These comments are being made 20 years after the start of the civil-rights movement, when black people's expectations were soaring.

In many areas, those expectations have given way to frustration and anger as more blacks are submitting to a lifetime routine of public charity and the realization that a generation has been lost since the movement began.

President Jimmy Carter, who won the White House largely due to black support, last May launched the costliest and fastest increase in federal jobs programs ever attempted.

His administration began pumping $8 billion into cities and counties to increase the number of public-service jobs, although the program has not had a great deal of effect on black unemployment because the jobs have gone to all races.

And now the National Urban League has come out against the president's proposed $25-billion tax cut because, it says, too little of the benefit would go to blacks and the cities.

Citing statistics that exasperate black leaders, the league said the number of whites living below the official poverty line dropped nearly 20 per cent, from 4.1 million to 3.4 million, between 1966 and 1976, while the number of blacks remained at 1.6 million.

"Still the harsh truth remains," says the League. "The majority of blacks have not seen their status materially improved over the past decade and that, for many, their lives are still lived out in despair and deprivation."

Applying for jobs that aren't there

After 12 Years of Destruction, China Restoring the Arts

By JOHN FRASER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — Since 1964, the performing arts in China have been in an appalling and debilitated state. This was, in general terms, part of the frightening legacy of the Cultural Revolution. More specifically, it was the handiwork of one person — Chiang Ching, the widow of Mao Tse-tung and a prominent member of the Gang of Four. A former film actress, Madame Mao set out to "reform" the arts and in the process destroyed them. It's as simple and staggering as that.

For 12 years in this vast country, there were only five model operas and two model ballets, all of them awful.

The White Haired Girl, which toured Canada last year in a Shanghai Ballet Company production, was the best of the lot and that rather says it all. In symphonic music, the story is just as bad.

Le Teh-lun, principal conductor of Peking's Capital Orchestra, told visiting Canadian musicians here that during the entire 12 years his orchestra was only permitted to practise and perform three pieces.

The greatest tragedy of all was the demise of Peking opera, a distinct and unique dramatic form known throughout China for two centuries, with artistic roots going back to the thirteenth century Yuan Dynasty.

"We must have unshakable confidence in the staging of Peking opera on revolutionary themes," declared Madame Mao in 1964. She then proceeded to dismantle the single most popular form of entertainment the Chinese knew, denouncing it as bourgeoise and reactionary. In the arts, it was a catastrophe of international and historic proportions as anyone who has ever seen traditional Peking opera can testify.

Miraculously, this vulnerable art is really being revived here. It isn't quite clear what is going on, but for the last few months — and particularly in the past three weeks — pre-Liberation operas in the traditional form have been presented on several Peking stages. Typically, there were some experiments in the provinces last summer, and now the results are being shown here.

The excitement at this singular turn of events has been shown by the demand for seats, and since the government has finally permitted its citizens to purchase tickets at a box-office rather than having them doled out through units or communities, ticket queues are becoming a familiar sight at theatres and movie houses.

One Chinese official I spoke to at a recent performance, a man who normally guards his words very well, was in an emotional state during the intermission. "You have no idea," he said with uncommon candor, "what a feeling we all have at seeing these old operas again. It is very moving."

Indeed it is. Three weeks ago, the Peking Opera Troupe staged a revival of Hell Raised in Heaven, a sensibly shortened adaptation of the original six-hour opera. This is a popular folk tale built around some of the mythology about Sun wu-Kung, the heroic Monkey King, whom the Chinese still adore for his courage, his craftiness and the way he can rout corrupt high officials.

The opera just appeared with hardly any advance notice. Then last month, another one was unveiled. Driven to Join the Liangshan Rebels was staged at the Political Consultative Auditorium and, to my mind, is the most auspicious revival to date. Although the story is based on an ancient folk tale from the Northern Sung Dynasty (960-1126 AD), it was first set to music and staged in Yenan in 1943 by Communist Party artists during what is indisputably the noblest period in Mao Tse-tung's career.

It is an opera done in the traditional Peking style, along with some of the original Communist reforms. These early reforms were mostly all laudatory, restoring women to the stage (they had been banned since the eighteenth-century rule of Emperor Chien Lung) as well as toning down a great deal of the ear-piercng falsetto voices. The promise implicit in the Yenan Period operas was that Peking opera would build on a traditional base while evolving new solutions and new perspectives.

When Madame Mao ended all that, it was thought by many people that Peking Opera, as the world had known and loved it, was dead — as vanished as Peking's ancient city walls. Yet here it is back again and seemingly quite vibrant, another example of the present government's attempts to turn the clock back to 1964, and make a new beginning.

The clock can't be turned back, of course, and a great deal of damage has been done. Traditionally, young performers joined a Peking opera company at the age of seven and apprenticed through the ranks. Most of the members of the Peking Opera Troupe did just that, but had their careers cut short during their teens. The performace of Driven to Join the Liangshan Rebels that I saw showed evidence of shakiness, together with a total lack of polish, particularly in getting a good balance between sung and spoken dialogue. Given the circumstances, that was to be expected; the miracle is that it is so good.

People who saw Peking-style opera on tours before the Cultural Revolution will remember that the traditional Chinese orchestra (two and three-stringed violins, flutes, cymbals and drums) sit on the right of the stage. The costumes are unbelievably beautiful and all the principal characters shuffle about on high Chinese clogs while wielding great significance through their long Mandarin sleeves.

The movement is painstakingly stylized, but in no way difficult to adjust to. Indeed, it often rises to great emotional heights. In Driven to Join the Liangshan Rebels, the hero — Drillmaster Lin Chung of the Imperial Guards — is forced into exile through a monstrous fraud. Confronted in a mock-court by his lying accuser, he is so overcome with indignation and frustration that his whole body is set into a frenzy of anguished motion. Such is our involvement that we share the rage and this studied effect almost seems naturalistic. While the music — shrill to Western ears — takes a while to accommodate, the real fun of Peking opera comes from the villains and acrobats, and this troupe takes to both with such panache and enthusiasm you wonder how they ever contained themselves during the dour, dark days of the Cultural Revolution. Peking opera was always a package deal: music, dance, hi-jinks, pathos, heroics, juggling and acrobatics. The way this crowd is going at it, the package will be complete very soon.

The Sorrows of Long People

russell baker

Short people are said to be angry about the success of a popular ditty called "Short People" which is a short heavy joke about persons of low altitude. As one of the long people, I want to urge these outraged short people to calm down. From down there where they live, they can't see what misery is.

It is the long people, not the short people, who have the hard life. Short people are never accosted by imbeciles who want to know, "How's the weather up there?" Short people never have to sleep with their feet dangling over the end of the mattress.

Male short people do not have to suffer nicknames like "Bones" and "Stork". Female short people never have to lean over to be kissed. Short people do not have to go through life seeing the dust on the top of the refrigerator or suffer the sneers of gymnasium authorities because they cannot touch their toes without bending at the knees.

Long people are expected to live in a perpetual stoop. This is one of the baldest injustices of all. In any standing or walking group of persons of diverse height, it is always the long person who is expected to strain anatomy and lower head and shoulders so the group can enjoy social cohesion.

Does the long member of the group insist that the short members jump to his level at least half the time so that the physical discomfort might be shared equally? Never. The long party stoops, and as the years of courteous, unselfish stooping begin to bow his back and permanently round his shoulders, people of less altitude deride him for bad posture.

I hope no short people will interpret these observations as a malicious whine, for there is no malice in them. This is another of the burdens of being one of the long people. Long people are not allowed to enjoy a healthy explosion of malice.

Long people must be gentle of temper like James Stewart or Gary Cooper or Abraham Lincoln. Let a long person attain the slightest measure of notoriety and newspaper scribblers will immediately announce that he has a "Lincolnesque" figure. Malice toward none is the dreary birthright of the lengthy frame.

Short people, on the other hand, are permitted to enjoy malice to the hilt. Nobody expects short people to be Lincolnesque. When a short person gets to the top, the cliches rolled out by the news writers are "cocky," "scrappy," "aggressive." If the journalist is going to engage in an extended celebration of his short subject he may exhume old anecdotes about the ferocity with which he has destroyed competitors twice his height and the trail of crushed spirits he has trod to the acme.

As one of the long people, I can tell you that we, too, secretly yearn to crush a spirit now and then. But woe be unto the person of great altitude who comes out of the closet and does so. He will not be hailed for a lovable, cocky, little scrapper, but regarded with suspicion and loathing as one who has failed Abraham Lincoln.

Short people, of course, enjoy the right to remind the world of Napoleon, who was famous for shortness and bloodshed.

If you must live in the twentieth century it is much more satisfying to be able to carry on like Napoleon than to have to bear the insolence of electronic machines and Los Angeles philosophers with malice toward none. Obviously, short people are in the catbird seat.

And yet it is not the short people who constitute the real power in the United States. The real power rests with that most shadowy of all height blocs, the regular people. The evidence of their power is everywhere, but they are nowhere.

Go to buy a suit and the salesman shows you rack upon rack of handsome garments tailored in "regular" sizes, while the one suit he has which comes near fitting your own irregular dimensions appears to have been cut from a horse blanket.

Seats on buses, subways and airplanes are built to accommodate regular people, but no regular people are ever seen in these seats. You see huge people who require three of them for comfort, tiny people whose feet barely touch the floor, long people with three feet of thigh bone jutting off the edge of the seat, but no regular people.

Where, then, are these regular people? Not at the haberdasher's, obviously. The only decent suits in the shop are the unsold "regular" sizes. My suspicion is that the regular people are not among us yet, but exercise their power from afar and will not appear to claim their kingdom until everything in it is fitted to their outlandish and inhuman dimension.

As one of the long people I am powerless to detest them with the malice necessary to act against their vile conspiracy, and anyhow my back is too tired from stooping. This is a job for short people, if they can quit complaining about music for a while.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were mixed in active mid-afternoon trading today on the Toronto stock market.

Trading halts continued in shares of Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. and Capital Diversified Industries Ltd. pending announcements. Four Seasons, halted at the opening at the company's request, last traded at $4.70 a share and Capital Diversified at $1.30.

Among other industrials, Noranda Mines A climbed 1 to $23⅜, Foodex Systems 70 cents to $5.50, Bell Canada ⅛ to $53, Standard Broadcasting ¼ to $10¼ and Home Oil A ¼ to $40½.

Dome Petroleum slumped 1 to $55⅞, Massey-Ferguson ⅞ to $13¾, Westcoast Petroleum A ½ to $21¼, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ½ to $42¾ and Norcen Energy Resources ⅛ to $16.

Sigma Mines Quebec gained 1 to $34, Giant Yellowknife Mines ⅜ to $12⅞ and Pamour Porcupine A ¼ to $5⅝. Pine Point Mines dropped ⅞ to $21¼ and Roman Corp. ⅝ to $24¾.

New York

Before the opening the government reported a 0.9 per cent rise in the wholesale price index for January.

The labor department's index of prices of finished goods — the next to last step in the distribution system before merchandise is priced for retail sale — rose 0.6 per cent in the month.

Analysts said both figures came in higher than Wall Street generally had been expecting.

But the news touched off no heavy selling pressure, and analysts said buyers began moving in once it became clear that the market was holding its own.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were fractionally lower in light to moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Massey-Ferguson dipped ⅝ to $14, Great Lakes Paper ⅛ to $24, Bombardier-MLW ⅜ to $5, Bank of Montreal ⅛ to $17¾, Inco A ⅛ to $16⅝ and Denison Mines ¼ to $59½. Hudson's Bay Company gained ¼ at $18⅜, Trimac A 1 at $17, Gulf Oil Canada ⅛ at $28¼ and Noranda A ¼ at $22¾.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market was moderately lower near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index was down three points to 470.3 an hour before the close. Industrial leaders drifted downwards, while gold stocks firmed with higher international bullion prices. Canadian stocks eased.

DEPT. STORE BANKRUPT

MONTREAL (CP) — Dupuis Freres Ltd. has been assigned into bankruptcy in Quebec Superior Court.

The petition was not contested by Dupuis president Yvon Goyette who closed the company's three Montreal department stores Jan. 27, putting about 700 employes out of work.

A bankruptcy petition was filed Jan. 25 by Ballin Manufacturing Co. Inc., an unsecured Dupuis creditor owed $10,000.

The two principal creditors — Royal Bank of Canada and Trust General of Canada — are owed $11.3 million of a total secured debt of $13.2 million, according to a statement filed by Dupuis Freres.

BOB and GRACE COOKE

Bob came to Canada from England, as a young man 29 years ago. After spending time in the merchant service, he found a career in theatre, always following his earlier desire to be an artist. 11 years ago he gave up the stage and went full time into art.
Grace was born in Saskatchewan and has actively been involved in music all her life. She sang at Butchart Gardens, taught at the Victoria Conservatory of Music, and now is a full time teacher at home.
Both Bob and Grace Cooke are artists and have paintings on display and for sale.

Bookie Charges for Seven

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven persons were charged Thursday with bookmaking offences after police conducted simultaneous raids here, in New Westminster and in Surrey.

Police said six person were arrested while a seventh, arrested in an earlier roundup of bookmaking suspects, is to be summonsed.

Police said the alleged offences occurred between Oct. 17, 1977 and Feb. 8, but did not say how much money was involved.

Phil Farrell and Loretta Farrell of Surrey were each charged with conspiracy, recording bets, keeping a common betting house and two counts of engaging in bookmaking.

Kay Gillies, Gary Wickland, Harry Collins and Robert Rogish, all of New Westminster, were charged with conspiracy, engaging in bookmaking, recording bets and keeping a common betting house.

Ajab Jack Singh of New Westminster was charged with conspiracy and engaging in bookmaking. He was not arrested Thursday, but will face these charges when he appears in court to face charges laid after a raid Jan. 15.

The raids were carried out by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit with assistance from Vancouver and New Westminster police forces, Surrey RCMP and from the RCMP gambling division.

Hunt Critics Nfld. 'Threat'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Protests against the Newfoundland seal hunt pose a threat to the preservation of the province, John Lundrigan, Newfoundland's rural development minister, said Thursday.

Speaking to a Newfoundland government news conference held to defend the annual hunt, Lundrigan said the hunt's opponents have made Newfoundlanders out to be "little less than barbarians."

"We are not aggressive people, but there is the impression now that there is a second-class race of people living on the east coast of Canada," he said.

Tom Hughes, executive vice-president of the Ontario Humane Society and a member of the five-man Newfoundland delegation, said the hunt is humane.

It is "an unpleasant and dirty sight, but it's a fact of life," said Hughes. "There is a great deal of cruelty in B.C. If you want to address yourself to cruelty, I suggest you start right here in B.C."

Capt. Morrissey Johnson, a Newfoundland sealer, said the seals are "put there by God for man to harvest."

"You are trying to destroy the dignity of a proud race of people who want to continue doing what they have been doing for years," he warned.

Larry Hume, a director of the Canadian Federation of Humane Societies and British Columbia branch president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was prevented from speaking against the hunt.

He was told to sit down by Hughes, who said the delegation was answering questions from the media only.

"I don't think they wish to be confronted by questions they don't like," Hume said later in an interview.

The Newfoundland government conference was followed immediately by another held by the Greenpeace Foundation, which opposes the hunt.

Greenpeace president Dr. Patrick Moore said the group will send 20 volunteers to shield seal pups and stand in the way of sealing ships.

Moore said the Newfoundland delegation misrepresented the facts and that Greenpeace opposed killing of all seals still nursing but would permit the taking of seals by local people for their survival.

Officer 'Not Guilty'

WATSON LAKE, Yukon (CP) — RCMP Corporal Ken Munro was found not guilty Thursday of common assault, a charge arising from the death last July 1 of Doug Johnston, 17.

Deputy Yukon Magistrate Dwayne Rowe ruled that Munro did not use excessive force when arresting the youth.

Several witnesses testified that Munro had swung Johnston against a garbage box and had choked him, but doctors were unable to find any evidence of that, Rowe said.

All medical evidence presented at the one-day trial had been heard at a coroner's inquest last September. Since Dr. Thomas Harmon of Vancouver was unable to establish the cause of death at that time, Crown prosecutor M. M. de Weerdt said common assault was the only charge that could be laid.

Judge Rowe said Thursday that Munro, although off duty and in plain clothes, was acting in his official capacity as a police officer when he arrested Johnston for creating a disturbance by swearing in a public place.

Hostage Takers In Court

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — Two of five prisoners facing eight charges as a result of a week-long hostage-taking incident at the British Columbia Penitentiary did not enter pleas and were remanded to Feb. 23 when they made separate appearances in provincial court Thursday.

Andrew Bruce, 29, and Steven Albert Hall appeared separately. Both were handcuffed and under heavy guard as they were marched into the court.

Three other prisoners—Ralph Lee Saumer, 27, David Gary Bennett, 29, and Richard Clarence Wright, 35—are scheduled to appear Feb. 14.

Bruce was brought to court under armed guard from the B.C. Pen where he, Saumer, Bennett and Wright are being held in the maximum security unit.

Hall was being held in an RCMP jail until this weekend, a condition granted him as part of an 18-point agreement reached before the final surrender Feb. 4.

BUSY DAY came for highways department crews this week when they first removed and then painted back a crosswalk in front of an elementary school in Port Moody, near Vancouver. The confusion stemmed from a highways department supervisor misreading a request that the crosswalk be removed in June when school is out. He thought the call was for immediate action.

Safety Change Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Both management and labor on the Vancouver waterfront joined forces Thursday to tell the federal government that it should not try to usurp the role of the British Columbia Workers' Compensation Board on the docks.

At a meeting with Dr. Adam Little, chairman of the WCB, and A. R. Gibbons, regional director of the federal department of labor, officials of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association said they did not want federal interference.

The WCB supervises safety standards on the docks and has a team of five inspectors devoted almost exclusively to waterfront activity in Vancouver and other B.C. ports. The department of labor has said that it will assume this work, starting Feb. 15.

After Thursday's meeting, ILWU Canadian area president Don Garcia said: "Both the BCMEA and ourselves are of the same mind. We don't want the confusion of having the federal government come in. It promises no improvements and we don't want change just for the sake of change."

Little said the WCB does work that elsewhere in the country is performed by the federal department of labor.

"I can only think that somebody in the department decided that they wanted everything symmetrical," he said. "But even the department acknowledges that we do a good job."

Norman Cunningham, vice-president of operations with the BCMEA, said: "We don't want to have to struggle with unfamiliar regulations and unfamiliar personnel."

"We went through strife and turmoil adjusting to the WCB and we don't want to repeat that unnecessarily."

The WCB was concerned with safety on the docks until 1968, when the federal government passed the Canada Labor Safety Act which gave the job of supervising dock safety to the department of labor.

The department did not send its inspectors to the B.C. waterfront or mount any safety education programs, so both the ILWU and the BCMEA requested that the WCB reinstate its service and the WCB resumed inspection work in 1970.

In 1976, the federal agency announced that it would nominate provincial government inspectors to represent it on the waterfront. Both the BCMEA and ILWU successfully resisted this move. This year, the department of labor announced that it would send its own employees to the docks to undertake inspections.

Little said the WCB has withdrawn from inspecting small fishing vessels at the request of the department of labor and already regrets this move.

"They don't have a good safety program and we are sorry we got out of it. We don't want the same situation on the waterfront. The WCB is not convinced that the department can set up and maintain an adequate program on the waterfront. This is a high-risk industry and we cannot afford to let safety standards slip."

Girl, 17, Sentenced Twice in One Day

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 17-year-old girl was sentenced Thursday to jail because of "despicable people in the drug scene."

"One shudders at the thought of what little chance such a girl as this has in a penal institution to which I must send her," said Judge Ray Paris when he sentenced Carol Ann Tober to two years less one day for possession of two ounces of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

It was the second jail term in one day for the girl.

In another court, Judge J. J. Anderson sentenced her to 12 months on a separate drug charge involving 21 caps of heroin. She has two previous heroin convictions.

Defence counsel Kenneth Westlake told both judges that Tober was virtually forced on to the streets at 15 in Eastern Canada because of her a family breakup.

The girl believed at that time that neither of her estranged parents wanted her and that the street was all that was left.

Westlake said she was picked up by a man in the drug trade who introduced her to heroin. She became an addict and he—as did other males who later picked her up—used her to promote their own financial gain.

During this time she became a prostitute.

"This is a classic example of a child from a broken marriage being forced on to the streets and exploited in a despicable way by the people in the drug scene that she met there," said Judge Paris.

Judge Paris sentenced her to two years less a day definite and one year indefinite. The sentence is concurrent to the 12-month term she received earlier Thursday.

PRIZE BOOK

A book containing prize-winning essays submitted in a Canada-wide contest last year to mark the Queen's silver jubilee will be presented to Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen at Government House Monday at 2:30 p.m.

Robert D. Neely, a Grade 8 student at Burnaby's McPherson Park Junior Secondary School, will present the book. Neely was the B.C. winner.

Sponsored by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, the contest was open to all Grade 8 students in Canada.

Mrs. Norman Turner, regent of the IODE Municipal Chapter of Victoria, and Mrs. Arthur Evans, education secretary, provincial chapter, will be at the presentation.

Snowpacks Normal

The environment ministry reported Thursday that snowpacks on B.C. mountains are at near-normal levels this winter after being dangerously low last winter.

Last winter's light snowpack led to water shortages in some areas of the province last summer.

NDP MORATORIUM CALL ON POWER 'PREMATURE'

Energy Minister Jack Davis says the NDP call for a moratorium on all B.C. Hydro power projects is premature in view of the multi-party committee investigating all Crown corporations.

Davis was responding to an appeal by Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) for a halt on all power projects not yet under way and a full-scale public inquiry into the province's energy needs.

Nicolson said he has figures to show the demand for power is not growing as fast as Hydro claims and that by 1987, Hydro will be producing 70 per cent more energy than it needs.

Davis said, however, there could be a small surplus of energy as various Hydro projects come on stream, but that they basically would be meeting B.C. needs.

He said the Committee on Crown Corporations will call Hydro to account for its future policies as well as past and present policies.

It would be prejudging that committee to declare a 10-year moratorium before the first investigation is launched, he said.

Nicolson said his proposal would not halt projects fully committed, but would end the Revelstoke dam and the Hat Creek thermal projects.

Fuel Use Cut 16% By Forces

Heating fuel consumption was reduced 16 per cent at CFB Esquimalt during 1976-1977 and an even bigger reduction is expected in the fiscal year that ends March 31, says an armed forces spokesman.

During the same year the base used about 40 million kilowatt hours of electricity — a reduction of one-third from the previous year.

Some of the methods used to accomplish the reductions were shutting off all lights whenever possible, reducing light intensity levels in offices, shutting off non-essential heat sources, closing down heating plants in the summer and replacing standard-size cars with smaller models.

The defence department has declared Feb. 13-17 Energy Conservation Week.

Oysters To Leisure

From oysters to leisure, if you want to learn about it, the provincial government has a course.

The ministry of education released a directory Thursday of all adult education programs and services offered by the government.

It lists 152 programs run by 16 ministries and 10 Crown corporations. Many of the courses are open only to civil servants.

Among some of the more unusal courses offered are: — Oyster Culture. Given by the recreation and conservation ministry, primarily for oyster growers wishing to improve their harvest.

— Management of Time. You have to be working for the Public Service Commission to get into this day-long seminar.

— All-Terrain Vehicle Education. In this course, public service employees are trained to operate jeeps and other such vehicles.

— Provincial Leisure-Development Course. This three-year diploma-granting program trains professional and others in recreation-oriented fields.

TRANSIT TALKS KEPT GOING

Labor Minister Allan Williams has extended the powers of mediator Ken Albertini to enable him to bring in a settlement in the contract dispute between B.C. Hydro and its transit workers, a union spokesman said Thursday.

Al Ashton, president of the Amalgamated Transit Union which served Hydro with 72-hour strike notice before Christmas, said Albertini will present his recommendations next Thursday or Friday.

He said Williams met with both sides Monday, and met the union and the mediator Thursday in efforts to prevent a strike by the 3,500 bus drivers, mechanics and tradesmen in Victoria and Vancouver.

Ashton said only two major issues remain to be solved — a reduction in the work week and a stop to what the union calls an erosion of working conditions.

Being a Parcel is a Hard Way to Go

You just have to feel sorry for some parcels that travel in the mail, says local post office public relations officer Buz Sawyer.

"Put a parcel in a mail sack and toss it on a truck. Maybe a ton of parcels will be thrown in on top. It can be a rough ride, especially if the truck is swaying and the parcels on top scrape over those beneath."

Third-class parcels get the roughest ride because they may travel long distances by train or truck.

"There will be mail damage from time to time but it is not always the fault of the post office," he said.

"Many times the damage occurs when some transportation company is handling the package. It is ridiculous what happens to some parcels."

Dale Snowdon of 923 Claremont could say "amen" to that statement.

On Thursday afternoon he received important legal documents with the envelope torn and more than half the 50 pages in shreds. He said there were rubber marks on the envelope, indicating that a wheel had run over it.

Sawyer today urged Snowdon to ask the post office customer service division to launch an investigation.

He said it may turn out that it was not the post office that damaged the parcel.

But the important thing, he said, is to find ways to avoid this kind of damage in the future.

However, the post office is moving more and more into containers for parcel delivery.

"There will still be parcels piled on top of parcels but the number will be limited by the size of the container. Without containers there can be a stack of parcels 20 feet high on top of some poor little box."

Post office customers can protect their parcels by using extra care in wrapping, he said.

Sawyer said mail delivery service will improve soon because of the increasing trend towards container shipments and, in the meantime, customers could use greater care in wrapping their parcels for delivery.

THE STUFF OF DREAMS . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jeanie Glazer and Karen Trester believe that crazy ideas should come true, like providing an elephant for a private parade, or organizing a marching band to meet a husband's plane.

If it's really whacko, it's now within reach of The Get Set, a company formed recently by the women to serve people who have everything . . . except what they see in their wildest dreams.

The Get Set will make almost anything happen as long as it's legal and kind, they say.

Earlier this week they catered a dinner at centre ice at the Pacific Coliseum for Mike Walton of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League. His wife ordered the affair because he is going to be on the road for Valentine's Day.

There was soft music, dim lights, flocks of doves, and a hockey fashion show.

The women are currently setting up a divorce party, with butterflies as the theme.

While the Get Set pair plan on going after anything within or without reason, they specialize in gourmet meals served in unusual atmospheres.

The Get Set menu offers extravagances ranging from a simple, delivered, breakfast for two with quail eggs ($25) to a charter flight dinner for 99 people to Shangri-La $20,000).

The "Once in a Lifetime" order has a butler prepare dinner in your home while you sip champagne and eat hors d'oeuvres in the back of a Rolls Royce $350). Yacht nights range from $1,000 to $2,500, all inclusive.

Last on the menu, but certainly not least, is dinner for two delivered for life. It costs $250,000.

Saltspring Drops New School Plan

Plans to construct a $500,000 elementary school at the north end of Salt Spring Island were cancelled Thursday by the Gulf Islands school board.

Fears of reducing the quality of education, coupled with declining enrolment and increased transportation costs were some of the reasons.

Trustees defeated in a 4-4 tie a motion to accept a tender for the project.

Opposition to a new school has come from the Gulf Islands Teachers Association and the Fernwood Parents Group.

The school was to have been built at Fernwood to relieve crowded conditions at Ganges Elementary School.

At the meeting, Trustee Spencer Marr said the island's declining birthrate makes a new school unfeasible.

A spokesman for the parents group said a new school would split the community and be unable to offer the quality of education available at Ganges school.

Trasportation costs would increase and travel become hazardous because of the condition of the roads in the Fernwood area, the spokesman said.

TOUR LICENCE DEADLINE NEAR

Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Rafe Mair is beginning to think travel agents are like motor vehicle owners — both groups seems to wait until the last minute to get licences.

February 21 is deadline for the estimated 600 provincial travel agents, tour operators and travel wholesalers to apply for an operating licence under the new Travel Agents' Registration Act.

So far, only 220 applications have been received by the ministry. Mair said applications should be in Victoria by Feb. 16.

"I certainly hope that every agent realizes he must register. Every agent or travel wholesaler who wishes to continue to do business in the province must register before the deadline," the minister said.

Noise and hearing in the workplace: A special seminar

Of particular interest to senior labour and management representatives and medical practitioners.

The Workers' Compensation Board will be holding a special day-long seminar on Industrial Audiometry—the science of hearing measurement in the workplace. This seminar will cover the new Industrial Health and Safety Regulations, noise measurement and control, ear protection, and the new computerized system for audiometric data. There is no fee for the seminar, but pre-registration is required.

This seminar will be held Friday, February 17, from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the University of Victoria, Lower Lounge, Commons Room.

Please pre-register at the W.C.B. Office, 1581 Hillside Ave., phone 595-1122.

Unity Bank Near Chaos in 1973, Witness Tells Court

A former general manager of Unity Bank of Canada said Thursday the bank was "in a state of something approaching chaos" when he joined it in October of 1973.

David Trevor Matthews was testifying at the county court trial of William Alfred Eastgate, 43, a Central Saanich land developer, and Richard Brian Higgins, 42, of Saanich, president of Unity Bank from its formation in 1972 until late 1975. Unity Bank was taken over by Provincial Bank in 1977.

They are accused of conspiracy to obstruct justice between April 26 and 30, 1977, and corruptly offering or agreeing to accept a secret commission between Jan. 1, 1973, and April 30, 1977.

Matthews was the final witness to testify in the trial which has occupied 15 court days. Summations by Crown counsel Mike Hutchison, Eastgate's lawyer, Derek Brindle, and Higgins' lawyer, Peter Freeman, are to be given before Judge Peter Millward Feb. 27 and 28.

Matthews said when he started at Unity Bank as general manager the credit department was one which needed "a lot of attention." There was no system of reporting loans from branches to head office before then, although a reporting procedure was being set up.

He said there was no credit committee and the board of directors had delegated a credit limit of $500,000 to Higgins as president and he had "in effect" delegated that to the credit department. The directors' executive committee had to authorize loans above $500,000.

He said this was a "very inefficient way of doing things" and there was "confusion as to who was responsible to what at various times." He said he began to set up a new structure, including establishing a chain of responsibility.

He agreed it was the function of the credit department to report loans over $75,000 (later increased to $100,000) to the executive committee. These reports were for background information and contained only lists of names and amounts and a brief description.

Matthews said he knew Eastgate was representing Unity Bank in Victoria placing mortgages and he became aware of loans to him.

Court has been told that Higgins authorized a personal line of credit to Eastgate (later changed to his holding company, W.A.E. Holdings Ltd.) of $250,000 in late January, 1973, and $425,000 credit to Seaboard Enterprises Ltd. in May, 1973, for a land assembly scheme in Central Saanich. Eastgate is president of that company and a minority shareholder in it.

Matthews said the loans were moved from the bank's books in Toronto to the new Vancouver branch in 1974 and this involved their re-authorization, including approval from the credit committee. Later, he agreed there was no consideration by the credit committee of the original terms of the loans but simply the documentation which accompanied the re-authorization in 1974.

The loans have been repaid, he said.

Matthews said Higgins never applied pressure on him to approve or maintain loans to Eastgate. He also said Higgins never asked him to suppress existence of the loans or withhold information about the loans from the board of directors.

Asked if it was possible, in his opinion, for Higgins to systematically keep information from the board regarding loans made by Unity Bank, he said "no."

Matthews said Higgins hadn't exceeded his credit authority of $500,000 because the two matters before the court were different kinds of credit lines.

He said opening a new national bank is "very complicated" and in the first year 16 branches were opened and "paper was flying around in unbelievable quantities."

Eastgate, completing his cross-examination, said his partners in the Seaboard group of companies became aware during 1976 of his offer of employment to Higgins as a real estate salesman and financial adviser.

He said earlier that employment negotiations were on a verbal, trust basis and that was why there was no mention of it in a profit-splitting arrangement created as an incentive for employment.

A memo signed by Eastgate and Higgins, dated May 16, 1973, but which both men said was made in December, 1974, and backdated, agreed to share equally in profits or losses of a 10-acre subdivision on Doney Road in Central Saanich by W.A.E. Holdings Ltd. and Seaboard Enterprises Ltd. in which W.A.E. had a half-interest.

Firms to Bid For Railwest

The provincial government-owned Railwest railcar manufacturing plant in Squamish, closed since August, may be purchased and reopened by a private firm, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Thursday.

Phillips said in an interview there are several companies — some from Eastern Canada — looking at the plant and one of them has made a firm proposal.

He said the company must make a decision by next Wednesday on whether it intends to proceed. If not, he said, the government will then be able to consider offers from other companies.

The minister would give no further details about the prospects of reopening the plant, which employed about 250 workers.

Representatives of Nippon Kokan K.K., a Japanese steel corporation, toured the Railwest plant this week.

Shin-Ichi Hirayama, general manager of the firm's North American operations, declined Wednesday to make any comment on his Monday visit to the plant.

The plant, built by the former New Democratic Party government to manufacture railcars for the Crown-owned B.C. Railway, was closed because of its failure to win contracts.

The plant and adjoining wharf facilities are being offered for about $5.5 million, a source said.

SNOW EXCUSE WON'T GET PAY

DUNCAN — No snow nor rain nor dark of night shall keep School District 65 teachers from making their appointed classroom rounds as far as the trustees are concerned.

A bid by teachers for payment on days they are absent due to bad weather was rejected by the board.

Board secretary-treasurer Bill Brown said teachers did not feel they should lose a day's pay when they are unable to get to school.

Trustee Gerry Joyce moved that the board re-examine its policy, arguing that it was "rather ridiculous, when you are hiring someone annually. If there are no pupils attending because of snow, it's rather unworkable and possibly penal to have teachers report to the schools."

OLD HEARSE HIS HOBBY

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Ross Magee of Oshawa is refurbishing a 12-foot-long glass-walled hearse which is one of more than 25 antique carriages, buggies and other horse-drawn vehicles in his collection.

The hearse, which is more than 150 years old, is made of solid white oak.

Magee said he hopes to refurbish it by spring and enter it in fairs and parades.

Magee, a quality-control department employee at General Motors, also owns a 1914 McLaughlin carriage and an 1895 Black Maria removal wagon.

"That one was used to remove the body from the house and take it to the funeral home," he said.

Magee said his hobby began about eight years ago when he bought a carriage at Beaverton, Ont.

Most of the antiques in his collection were made in Ontario although the hearse was made in the Gaspe region of Quebec and a cutter comes from Woodstock, N.B.

Firework Damage

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Fireworks to welcome the Chinese New Year started fires across Malaysia that did an estimated $1 million damage in two days, authorities said. No injuries were reported. The biggest of the fires was a $400,000 blaze at a rubber plant near Penang.

Free Public Transit Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Transportation Secretary Brock Adams says his department wants to build a free public transit system in a major city to lure people out of their cars and save gasoline.

"We're looking for a city," he told the National Press Club on Wednesday. "We're willing to back it 100 percent to see if it really works. If it does, local officials in many areas may come up with the money for free-ride systems."

A department official said discussions had been held with several cities. He declined to identify them, but it was learned that Denver was one.

Adams also said the United States must shift from expanding to improving and maintaining its existing transportation network.

Most of the interstate highway system is completed, although some of it already is deteriorating; the railroads are in place, but in trouble; urban transit systems have been taken over from failing private companies and improved, but much needs to be done, he noted.

Long-Distance Love Affair

EDMONTON (CP) — What price puppy-love?

About $64.32.

That's how much it cost 11-year-old Michael Pearson of Edmonton to place 39 telephone calls via long distance to his first love, actress Farrah Fawcett Majors.

The boy said she has not returned any of his calls.

"All I'd like to do is talk to her, maybe get a picture of her or arrange to meet here if she ever visits here or I go to California to visit my grandparents," Michael said.

After he saw her in a bit part in a movie, he bought posters, watched for stories in magazines and tuned in every week for the television show Charlie's Angels, on which she no longer stars.

One Way to Beat the Housewife Blahs

HOUSTON — Sylvia Jean Brown tired of tending house and raising children. Looking for something to enrich her life, she chose a .38-calibre pistol, a .45-calibre automatic, a sawed-off shotgun and five years of crime.

The 5-foot, 110-pound Mrs. Brown was caught and sentenced to 25 years in prison for seven armed robberies, two forgeries and a burglary.

"I don't really know exactly what happened," she said.

"There was always something about me which called for an independent life. I had lost my individuality."

Prosecutors described the petite redhead, now 35, as a regular Ma Barker, the notorious desperado of the 1930s.

"If I had lived in her time, life would have been gorgeous," she said, and pointed out she would not have needed a Pretty Boy Floyd or Clyde Barrow to help her.

"The thing that makes me mad," she said, "is when police act like I couldn't do it all by myself without some man along.

"My femininity is the element of surprise. You should see the look on their faces when I pull a gun and tell them what I want. My life's dream has been to have lived in the 1920s or the 1800s. I can imagine being an outlaw then. Women then were always in the background."

Mrs. Brown said it began when she moved from Huntsville, Tex., to Houston in 1973 and decided her children were "going to have what I want them to have."

Mrs. Brown was arrested last August by police while driving a stolen car. They found the three weapons in the auto, and an investigation led to her prison sentence.

"It's too bad there is no legal way people can live like this," she said.

STILL NO DECISION ON STRANGLER RAP

LOS ANGELES — What shall the Los Angeles police do with Ned York? They have one more day to decide.

The bit-part actor was arrested Wednesday for investigation into one of the 12 Hillside Strangler killings.

Police said York claimed responsibility for the killings in a rambling telephone call and booked him for investigation of murder, an action that gave them 72 hours to press a firmer charge or let York go.

Police Cmdr. William Booth said Thursday that after searching York's apartment and talking to the 32-year-old actor, there was no concrete evidence linking York to the killings.

Police said they confiscated a small amount of what appeared to be a marijuana concentrate, but by early today they had not charged him with possession and would not say how much they had confiscated.

York, an extremely religious man who was separated from his wife three weeks ago, was held for investigation in the death of 20-year-old Kristina Weckler, considered the strangler's ninth victim.

Friends of York told reporters the actor had been up all night Tuesday talking with a friend about Miss Weckler before he called police.

Booth said York was suffering from "mental exhaustion" when he called.

York was described by a friend, Bill Devroe, as "very religious. "Everything was 'God bless you' and 'Jesus loves you,' " he said.

Escaped Nazi Kappler Dies of Cancer

SOLTAU, West Germany — Convicted Nazi war criminal Herbert Kappler died of stomach cancer at his wife's home here today, police sources said.

Death came five months after his wife helped him flee an Italian prison hospital to spend his last days in Germany.

Kappler was convicted of ordering the shooting of 335 Romans in the Ardeatine Caves near Rome on March 24, 1944, just 24 hours after Italian partisans killed 32 German soldiers marching on a Roman street.

His escape at the age of 70 last August created a political furor when West Germany refused an Italian request for his extradition.

Play Deifies Elvis Legend

NEW YORK — The ghost of Elvis Presley is haunting the Broadway theatre district.

His quintessence, if not essence, has been reborn in a new play at the venerated Palace Theatre, Elvis: The Legend Lives.

He has been beatified, canonized, deified and now recreated before the audiences' very eyes.

The star reflecting the king of rock is Rick Saucedo, dubbed "the prince of rock." Onstage he looks quite like Elvis, sings and moves like Elvis.

Saucedo, interviewed after his stimulating simulation, was aghast at hints of profiteering. "It's a disgrace to look at it like that. It's not for the money.

However, he added: "I want to build a name, make a career. Besides, you can't live off of sympathy."

One of the producers, John Finocchio, said: "This country was built on capitalism. We are supplying a demand, a need, although it is not as cold-blooded as that.

"We are presenting to Elvis fans an honest tribute to his talent, a play which recaptures the feeling he generated for audiences."

The show does spark some of the sensuality and excitement for which Presley was famed.

EVEL'S BACK IN HOSPITAL

LOS ANGELES — Evel Knievel, serving a six-month jail sentence for attacking his former manager with a baseball bat, has been admitted to hospital for treatment of back injuries, officials say.

Knievel is said to be suffering from an old motorcycle injury that resulted in a fractured vertebra. A doctor at the county jail facility in Mira Loma said Knievel needed an immediate operation to prevent the onset of paralysis.

Redbird's Desire

DETROIT — An aging Cherokee Indian, voiceless because of throat cancer, is asking President Jimmy Carter to change his mind and accept a handmade feathered headdress like the one he has given to every president since Woodrow Wilson.

Chief Redbird, 78, and convalescing in a Detroit area nursing home after surgery last year to remove a malignant larynx, said he sent a headdress to the White House shortly after Carter was elected.

However, because of Carter's policy of accepting no gifts from the public, the headdress, made with turkey feathers, was returned.

LORDS OF THE EARTH

The Saga of the YALI. Masters of jungle warfare who keep shooting until arrows pierce their victim's flesh "as thick as reeds in a swamp". Self-styled "LORDS OF THE EARTH", the YALI reigned supreme in Dutch New Guinea's stone-age hell. Then the unexpected befell them . . . . . . an aircraft, lost in a storm, crashed and burned. 9-year-old PAUL NEWMAN, sole survivor, fled toward a Yali village, seeking shelter . . . unaware that the villagers whose help he sought had mercilessly slain two missionaries three months earlier, and intended to do the same to anyone else who entered their valley.

STICKERS DROPPED

EDMONTON (CP) — A plan by the Alberta Young Liberals to distribute bumper stickers saying "To Heck With Levesque" has been scrapped.

Young Liberal President Lorne Gunter said today the idea started as a joke, "but went downhill from there."

He said he was distressed by publicity that the plan had received and added that the 500 bumper stickers would not be circulated by the Young Liberals.

Gunter, 20, an arts student at the University of Alberta, confirmed reports that the group had ordered the stickers.

"This is something that the young Liberals did themselves," he said. "It does not echo my feelings about Levesque, who I admire.

'None of Your Business'

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The reply was an angry "none of your business" Thursday when Opposition Leader Joe Clark tried to find out whether Prime Minister Trudeau had checked thoroughly into the background of his current and former solicitors-general.

Clark wanted to know if Trudeau had asked either Francis Fox or Jean-Jacques Blais, who replaced Fox after his recent resignation over a brewing sex scandal, whether there had been anything in their past that prevented them from taking what is, after all, the job as Canada's top lawman.

Trudeau at first evaded answering the questions directly, saying, among other things, that the RCMP had looked into all prospective cabinet ministers's backgrounds.

When Clark pressed for a yes-or-no answer after about five minutes of fencing, Trudeau became annoyed.

"... I am satisfied when I appoint a person to the cabinet," he shot back. "The reasons for which I reach my conclusion, the questions I ask and the answers I receive are none of the honorable member's business!"

Clark tried later to force early adjournment of the House in protest over the prime minister's attitude, but failed, in a Liberal-dominated Parliament, to get the necessary support in a vote.

Que. Raid Stories Differ

MONTREAL (CP) — A former Quebec justice minister and the man who used to be the province's top policeman offered flatly contradictory stories Thursday, as each tried to explain his role in the public controversy which followed a police raid on a left-wing news agency in 1972.

Jerome Choquette, Liberal justice minister at the time of the raid, said the director of the Quebec provincial police told him within days of the incident that no policemen were involved.

But Maurice St. Pierre, then the chief of the provincial force, maintained he never talked to Choquette, and did not learn until nearly four years later that his men collaborated with the RCMP and Montreal municipal police to raid the Agence de Presse Libre du Quebec in October, 1972.

"I don't remember having communicated with Mr. Choquette," St. Pierre told the Keable inquiry into police wrongding. "If I had, I would have prepared a written report because of the serious nature of the affair."

Choquette testified that St. Pierre had told him in a telephone conversation that neither the provincial police nor any other force took part in the break-in.

It was because of what St. Pierre told him, Choquette said, that he sent a telegram to the news agency five days after the raid denying police involvement.

St. Pierre, however, said that he never got a copy of a letter addressed to both him and Choquette by the Agence de Presse Libre, which accused the provincial police of taking part in the raid.

Like Choquette, the former director said he did not learn the truth until March, 1976, when former RCMP constable Robert Samson blew the whistle on the police.

St. Pierre also testified that on at least one occassion while he headed the force, he stopped provincial police anti-terrorist officers from committing an illegal act.

He said a senior anti-terrorist officer had proposed planting a bomb to give an undercover agent credibility and respect in the eyes of members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

In another development Thursday, commissioner Jean Keable ordered federal Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais to appear in person next Tuesday if he decides to refuse a request to hand over RCMP documents and files.

MP Denies Charge

ST. JOHN'S (CP) — Dave Rooney, a Newfoundland Liberal MP charged with influence peddling as a result of an RCMP investigation, says he is innocent.

Rooney, who represents Bonavista-Trinity-Conception in the Commons, also said in an interview in St. John's Thursday that assault charges laid against him and his wife Ruth by a freelance photographer resulted from an incident that was blown out of proportion.

Rooney was charged in Ottawa after Commons Speaker James Jerome asked the RCMP to investigate allegations contained in a story in the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Rooney said claims by Singleton about kickbacks were untrue. Singleton was quoted as saying he had paid Rooney $500 over five months as a kickback for being placed on the Commons payroll.

"My information is that he told the RCMP he gave me mostly cash and money orders," Rooney said. "There are no money orders and he never gave me a cent in my life."

Love and Marriage Keeping Parliamentarians Busy

OTTAWA (CP) — Three unique cases of love and marriage now before the Senate have prompted Justice Minister Ron Basford to consider law reforms that would enable closely related couples to wed without bothering Parliament.

Basford has told the Senate he hopes to change current practice that requires Parliament to pass separate bills for couples like Lucien and Marie Morin of Saint-Mathieu, Que., related by adoption, or James and Judy Borden of Regina and Eugene Waddell and Marguerite Benoit of Montreal, both uncles and nieces. Each couple is seeking passage of private laws permitting them to marry.

The requirement results mainly from complications in federal and provincial jurisdiction over marriage law. Basford said in a letter to the Senate this week he has asked justice officials to study the possibility of legislative proposals that would permit settlement of such cases outside Parliament.

Meanwhile, Senators this week gave approval in principle to bills permitting the three couples to marry. Each bill is sponsored by a Senator and an MP and costs the couples each a $200 fee plus $150 per page of legislation — two pages in each case. They still must be debated in Parliamentary committees and approved by MPs in the Commons.

Generally, provincial governments have jurisdiction over solemnization of marriage which means they control licences, permits, publication of banns, rules on parental consent, the wedding ceremony and health requirements. But Parliament has authority over who can and cannot get married on the basis of consanguinity — blood relationship.

Legal authorities here say the list of relatives who are prohibited marrying exists only in common law and dates back to a table published in 1563 by Archbishop Parker under the laws of Henry VIII.

In the case of the Saskatchewan couple, James, 33, and his 27-year-old niece Judy have two children but are prohibited by common law from marrying. Uncle and niece couples are on Archbishop Parker's ancient list which is cited in Saskatchewan law. So Parliament must make an exception for them.

The situation is more complicated for the Quebec couple, Lucien, 41, and his adopted sister Marie, 31, because the Adoption Act of Quebec gives Marie full status as a legitimate sister.

Probe Opens Soon On Mail-Spy Need

MONTREAL (CP) — A royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing hopes to begin work late this month on a report on whether or not the RCMP should have the power to open first-class mail.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, the commission chairman, would give no hint at a news conference Thursday how the three-man commission feels about RCMP contentions that this is a necessary power, especially in investigations involving national security and drugs.

"That's for the report," Guy Gilbert, a commissioner, said with a grin.

RCMP witnesses have told the commission mail has been opened at least 90 times in the 1970s by security service agents operating illegally and uncounted times by drug investigators.

However the RCMP has become tangled in its spurs when trying to justify mail-opening.

Testimony last week indicated electronic eavesdropping and informants played a major role in 1976 in picking up Toshio Omura, a Japanese Red Army member.

Watching mail going to and from Omura's brother in Toronto kept RCMP alert to Omura's possible arrival in Canada but opening mail—done twice in this case—contributed virtually nothing.

McDonald said the commission hopes to begin looking at the possibility of a report a week from now.

In hearings next week in Ottawa, testimony from Paul Boisvert, director of security for the post office, will be concluded. The commission will hold an in-camera session on RCMP mail-opening techniques. And McDonald said the RCMP may present one or two further national security cases, possibly behind closed doors.

Some research also had to be done. The commission would look specifically at current Criminal Code provisions on electronic eavesdropping that were passed in 1974 and made official eavesdropping legal.

Under the eavesdropping law, the force must seek a warrant from a judge before it can bug a dwelling or tap a telephone. Under the warrant, it may do so only for a limited time and must later inform the person they have tuned in on.

Investors in Quebec Deterred

MONTREAL (CP) — Uncertainty about Quebec's future status in Confederation is deterring foreign investors from launching new projects in the province, says the chairman of the Swiss-controlled St. Lawrence Cement Co.

But Erwin Maechler said Thursday in a speech to the Swiss-Canadian Chamber of Commerce that this reluctance to invest new funds has not extended into maintaining existing investment.

He said he would be inclined "to turn down any major new investment in the sense of providing substantial new foreign capital at least as long as this crucial issue of political separation is pending.

"But confidence for Canada as a whole in Europe is still high and I would not see any obstacle to invest important new capital (funds) in the other provinces."

Maechler is a director of the Zurich-based Holderbank Financiere Glarus A.G. which controls 54 per cent of Montreal-based St. Lawrence Cement. The cement company reported sales of $1 billion in 1976, its last reported year.

Maechler said it is the responsibility of multinational companies to stay aloof from local politics and not pull out of any country or province simply because of a change of government.

His company is not considering moving from Quebec because "industrial investments are of a long-term nature."

No Shoe Shortage From Curbs-Horner

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jack Horner denied reports Thursday that there will be a shortage of shoes in Canada this year because of import restrictions.

Horner told John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) that newspaper reports which forecast the shortage were exaggerated.

The reports quoted department store officials as saying that the quotas will force Canadian shoe manufacturers to increase their production this year by 50 per cent to meet demands. However, it was predicted the demand would not be met.

Horner said the quotas merely limit companies from importing a quantity of shoes in excess of the average of their imports during 1974 and 1975, so the domestic market would not be forced to produce a much larger quantity than in the past.

The quotas were levied following intense lobbying efforts by Canada's shoe manufacturing industry, which is centred in Quebec.

Horner said that in 1974 and 1975, Canadian producers had 56 per cent of the domestic market. The flood of imports reduced the Canadian share to 41 per cent.

The minister said he hoped the import quotas will permit the domestic producers to reach their previous level.

COMPUTERS BRING UTOPIA, DOOMSDAY

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A United States scientist says that rapidly-expanding computer technology will bring about what he calls a combination of utopia and doomsday within the next few decades.

Earl Joseph, computer scientist with Sperry Univac Computer Systems, St. Paul, Minn., was speaking Thursday at the University of Western Ontario school of business administration.

He said smaller, more efficient computer components will bring many changes to traditional business and social activities.

Computers will displace a lot of jobs but at the same time will accelerate the creation of jobs, he said.

"The fear that automation would lead to massive unemployment has turned out to be a myth."

Bilingual Answer

LONDON (FP) — Switchboard operators at the Canadian High Commission here are making an effort to prove that Canada is a country of two official languages.

They are saying "Bonjour" when they answer telephone. An official confirmed that the practice is new.

"We undertake to provide services in both official languages and there are practical difficulties sometimes," he said. One such difficulty is finding bilingual switchboard operators. The telephonists are hired locally and at rather low British wages.

The women have been instructed to say "Bonjour" to all callers. But someone who is French-speaking is referred to a bilingual commission staff member who is on fulltime standby.

Public facilities at Canada House and MacDonald House, the two commission buildings here, are staffed by bilingual receptionists and office directories are in French as well as English.

POLLUTION HIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian and United States officials will meet Feb. 16 for formal discussions on the fluoride pollution problem at Cornwall Island, Ont., says Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner.

The formal consultations will be between external affairs and U.S. state department officials, Faulkner says in a letter to be delivered Friday morning to the St. Regis Indian band.

Earlier this week the band gave Faulkner a stinging 14-page letter on the problem and a report that says excessive exposure to fluoride pollution likely is seriously affecting human health on the island.

Name Source -Police

EDMONTON (CP) — City police will not investigate a trucker's story that police did not promptly help a woman who said she had been raped Saturday unless The Journal names its source.

Police said Thursday that an investigation into the sex assault itself has been dropped.

The woman has failed to co-operate with investigating officers, police said. They are now calling the incident an alleged indecent assault.

In an interview, the victim said she was raped by one of two men early Saturday, but escaped the second man and fled semi-nude and barefoot.

MONTREAL FIRM PLANS $50,000 CAR

MONTREAL (CP) — Trebron Atta Corp., a Montreal-based automotive design company, plans to build a $50,000 sportscar rivalling the prestigious European-made Ferarri and Lamborghini.

Company president Norbert Hamy said production could start as early as October. He said Trebron Atta is investigating the possibility of building the car in New Brunswick, providing employment initially for about 50 people.

Hamy said he designed the car as a showpiece for his company.

"It wasn't until we exhibited the prototype in a recent Toronto automotive show that the keen international interest showed us we had a marketable product," Hamy said.

He said Trebron hopes to sell 100 cars the first year, mainly to customers in Europe and the Middle East.

Probe Adjourns

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government inquiry into the issuing of guide outfitter licences adjourned Wednesday until Feb. 16 after a witness failed to appear.

Report Backs Indian Charges

EDMONTON (CP) — A 1973 report, kept secret until last week, supports allegations by the Upper Hay River Indian band that Indian Affairs officials mismanaged funds and projects on the reserve, band officials say.

A copy of the report was received by the band last Friday. Band spokesmen said they had been promised in 1972, when the report was commissioned by then Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, that they would receive a copy as soon as possible. The investigation was completed in October, 1973.

The investigation was into complaints by the Slavey Indians of the Upper Hay River reserve that department officials were getting the band involved in doubtful business ventures and projects that were benefiting whites more than natives.

The report is highly critical of several projects and improvements undertaken by the band and the department.

ONTARIO, OTTAWA REJECT STOCKPILING INCO NICKEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and Ontario have rejected a last-ditch proposal by a provincial legislature committee to stockpile nickel for 30 days to delay massive layoffs of Inco. Ltd. workers beginning Monday at Sudbury, Ont., federal officials said.

Federal Mines Minister Alastair Gillespie and Employment Minister Bud Cullen met for 30 minutes here Thursday with Frank Miller, Ontario natural resources minister, to consider the committee's recommendations, which were released Wednesday.

"It's clear the Ontario government does not endorse the committee's position on stockpiling," Gillespie said.

Gillespie reiterated past remarks that the federal government does not believe that stockpiling of nickel until such time as the market improves is the solution to planned layoff of 1,000 workers Monday.

The stockpiling proposal was an integral part of the select committee's recommendation that proposed another 30-day delay through a job-sharing scheme.

Gillespie said Ottawa and Ontario agreed it would be useful if the union and company could agree on job-sharing proposals that met with unemployment insurance regulations.

Under such a plan, employees would work for three weeks and draw unemployment insurance benefits during the fourth.

Inco and union representatives were not invited to the talks.

Gillespie said Miller asked for the federal government's position on stockpiling and was told that Ottawa has not changed its stance.

Gillespie told the Commons Wednesday the prospects for marketing of nickel would not be improved by stockpiling.

Restigouche Mercy Trip

She is steaming to Niue, about 400 miles southeast of Samoa.

An armed forces spokesman said today Niue has been suffering from a severe drought and the Western Samoan government had appealed to the Canadian vessel to help transport badly needed supplies.

These supplies include 420 crates of bananas, other food, and taro roots.

Restigouche has been in Apia for three days and is expected to reach Niue on Sunday morning.

Commanded by Cmdr. H.T. Porter, Restigouche is expected to take four hours to unload the emergency supplies and then continue on her deployment.

Meanwhile, HMCS Kootenay, the other destroyer on the cruise which ends May 3, arrived in Nuka Alofa on the island of Tonga today and will be there until Monday.

The accompanying supply ship, HMCS Provider, arrived at the port of Suva in Fiji today and will leave there on Tuesday.

All three ships will rendezvous off New Zealand on Thursday and pay a three-day visit to Auckland from Feb. 17 to 20.

Albert Head Park Levy To Stay

Albert Head residents will have to continue to help pay for the Juan de Fuca park and ice arena, the Capital Regional Board decided this week.

The board will apply for supplementary letters patent so that from 1978 on the residents can be taxed.

When the park was bought and the arena built the costs were to be paid by Colwood and Langford residents. At that time Albert Head was part of the Colwood electoral district.

Later Albert Head applied to become part of the Metchosin district because of historic associations and its rural outlook.

At that time Albert Head residents said they had no intention of trying to avoid their financial commitment to the cost of the park and arena.

A Wrist-Slapping for Glazier

Ald. Murray Glazier had his wrist slapped by city council Thursday for failing to follow proper procedures in his fight to have the province make changes to its Assessment Amendment Act.

Glazier, who together with Mayor Mike Young presented a brief on the matter to cabinet last week, was scheduled to meet with Finance Minister Evan Wolfe today for detailed discussions.

Glazier is urging the government to assign apartment blocks the same percentage of actual value for their taxable assessed value as other commercial properties.

He says that as tax assessments now stand, apartment blocks are enjoying a 30.7 per cent downward shift of the tax burden, as compared to last year, while single family residences and duplexes are paying 13.9 per cent more.

Except for Ald. Ron McKenzie no one on council has expressed any doubts about Glazier's point, but they just don't like the way he's going about making it.

Glazier forgot to take his brief to council's finance committee for approval.

That oversight, pointed out an irate McKenzie, meant that Glazier had presented a brief to cabinet that wasn't officially endorsed by council.

McKenzie asked that the meeting with Wolfe be called off until council had decided whether to officially support Glazier's stand.

McKenzie dropped his motion only after Glazier promised to tell Wolfe that the brief did not yet have council's stamp of approval.

Another procedural hassle had tied up council earlier in the meeting, when Ald. Bill McElroy fell asleep at the switch for a moment.

McElroy had been waiting to propose an amendment to a proposed land-use contract dealing with the conversion of the old Beacon Hill School on Douglas.

As council forged ahead in passing a spate of bylaws, McElroy inadvertently voted to pass the Beacon Hill contract.

When he realized what had happened, McElroy asked acting-mayor Bill Tindall if council could back up for a moment and take another run at the bylaw.

That request caused all kinds of confusion, because a bylaw can't be unpassed.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers eventually unravelled the matter, however, by informing Tindall that the mayor could recall the bylaw, at which time McElroy could propose his amendments.

CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF VICTORIA
WATER MAIN FLUSHING

The annual flushing of watermains within the City of Victoria and the Municipality of Esquimalt will be programmed between February 14th and March 30th, 1978. This may cause temporary but harmless discolouration of water. Any consumer (such as a laundry) to whom colour of water supplied is of vital importance will be notified in advance of operations in his vicinity if a request for such notification is received at the office of the undersigned, City Hall, VICTORIA, B.C., Telephone No. 385-5711, Local 266.

In no case, however, can the City accept responsibility for any damage arising out of the use of discoloured water, consumers are, therefore, advised to be on the alert for temporary discolouration.

Judge Raises Bar Ire

The Victoria Bar Association will hold a special meeting to review statements made earlier this week by a provincial court judge that were critical of the local law profession.

Association president Dean Wilson said today lawyers are enraged over Judge Fred Giles' suggestion some lawyers are entering "irresponsible" pleas on behalf of clients.

The judge, who said it was more normal to get up to 50 per cent guilty pleas, also lambasted local lawyers for not interviewing clients prior to their appearance in court and suggested the practice was "profesionally irresponsible."

Wilson said he has asked for a transcript of the morning's sitting and will call a meeting of the association's executive committee, hopefully next week.

Wilson said the association has three options. It can do nothing, ask permission from the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association to make a statement of its own, or refer the matter to the association's judicial council for action.

Region Rejects Controls On Dogs

There will be no dog control in the unorganized areas of the Capital Regional District, at least for the time being.

A recommendation to apply for supplementary letters patent to allow regional take-over of dog control was defeated this week.

It failed to get the two-thirds majority of directors from the unorganized areas needed to pass.

Langford's Ed Lubick, with three votes, opposed the motion, thus defeating it. View Royal's Al Beasley, with one vote, also opposed the motion.

Lubick said Langford did not have a problem with dogs and residents of that area should not be saddled with what could be an expensive program, involving compensation for sheep killed by marauding dogs.

Sooke director Charles Perkins said most of the complaints received involved people and dogs rather than sheep and dogs.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said there is an acute dog problem but he did not think the region should take over a responsibility the provincial government had abdicated unless the government is willing to contribute financially toward the program.

TOWN TALK

Any man who's a keypunch operator shouldn't bother applying for a job with the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Now if that isn't (water) closet discrimination, we don't know what is.

Kathleen Ruff, where are you?

No one would really expect any self-respecting bureaucrat to use the phrase "red tape," and Saanich municipal planner Dave Harper is not about to let the side down.

But at a public meeting Thursday night on a draft plan for the Braefoot area, Harper momentarily slipped up and started to voice the phrase.

His improvised alternative — "the usual procedural delay involved in getting any rezoning application approved" — drew an appreciative chuckle from the audience.

As for us, we prefer red tape. You've got to admit, Dave, it's less of a mouthful and a far more appropriate term for the convoluted workings of bureaucracy.

There appears to be some disagreement whether the Chinese Year of the Horse that started Tuesday will be a year of prosperity or a year of want.

Some old-timers say business will prosper and there will be plenty of fun for people throughout the year.

But a Vancouver restaurateur whose hobby is Chinese astrology says he can't see anything in the stars indicating a prosperous year.

The horse, seventh of 12 animal symbols in the Chinese zodiac, indicates a year of business failures, he says.

And to make matters worse, he adds, it's going to be a wet one.

An old vase and the will to help has earned two Grade 6 students at Monterey School a trip to Vancouver and a television appearance.

Amy Levinson, 11, and Lawney Wright, 12, will be in Vancouver on Sunday to appear on BCTV's Variety Club Telethon from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Amy's grandfather, Dr. Sydney Israels, who recently retired as the head of the University of British Columbia's pediatrics department, is the motivation behind the girls' decision to raise money for the Variety Club.

He received the club's Heart Award in 1977 for the greatest contributon toward the fund drive.

They canvassed their school chums and collected $40 in quarters.

Amy's father, architect Ben Levinson, said today nobody expected the girls to raise much more than $10 and it is the unexpected backing of the Monterey students that has earned recognition in Vancouver.

McCarthy proposed the idea at a meeting with the North Saanich and Sidney chamber last week.

However, the chamber may decide on a modified version — three flagpoles at the end of the government wharf.

While it is estimated one motorist in 300 on the Lower Mainland is trying to pull a fast one on ICBC by switching licence plates or sharing a set of plates between two cars, motorists in Greater Victoria appear more law-abiding.

A Times survey of about 500 cars parked at city lots Thursday failed to come up with a single example.

Oh, we thought we had found one. A single-plated car was discovered parked in the government employee lot across the street from the Motor Vehicle Branch on Menzies, no less.

But when we finally located the owner, she explained she had just bought the car and had lost the bolts to attach the plate to her vehicle. The plate itself? It was sitting on the front seat of the car.

You can't attract tourists if you're going to be negative about such little things as rainstorms, says Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray. She told a meeting in Seattle that tourist organizations should start promoting the positive side of things.

For example, she said, the steady drizzle can be promoted as part of the great mild marine climate of the west coast and for a slogan, she said, how about "Singing in the Rain?"

Above all, the governor said, Washington must avoid making the kind of mistakes they make up in British Columbia where they spend large amounts to bring in tourists and then there is nothing for them to do and no place for them to stay when they arrive.

Each year the University of Victoria student newspaper, The Martlet, puts out a spoof issue which is usually no worse than the usual college-level attempt at satire.

This year their target is Punk as in punk rock. The layout of several pages consists of a montage of pictures of punk rockers and half-blocked out stories over which someone has scrawled inane graffiti making the satire all but impossible to read.

But the most amazing aspect of the punk section is an advertisement for mr. b'z hairdressing salon in Nootka Court.

The ad is a photograph of a particularly tender part of a woman's anatomy about to be assaulted by a pair of scissors over which the copy tells the reader: "It can hurt just about as much to get a bad haircut."

The ad is for real and mr. b'z says it has elicited a lot of response.

Not surprising.

Be My Valentine

It's an Old Pitch and These Days the Girls Make It

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Love is a two-way street, except on Valentines Day.

Then it is mainly the girls who are pitching and the guys who are catching, according to Victoria card shop employees.

"Most of our Valentine customers are women," says Mrs. Margaret McNamara of Davidson's House of Cards.

"Men buy, too, but usually at the last minute. They will rush in and buy a big card in a hurry. Over-all, it is mostly women who buy Valentines."

Department stores also report three women for every man at the Valentine counters.

Prices are about the same as last year, ranging from about a quarter for kiddie cards to $3, $3.50 or even $5 for the foot-high Valentines. All the big ones are for husband or wife.

Buying is already brisk, especially for relative cards that have to be mailed. This year there are cards for great grandparents as well as for daughters-in-law. You can even send your godfather a Valentine message he cannot refuse.

The love theme is universal in the cards but the expressions are varied.

They range from "I'll never stop loving you" to "Be my valentine . . . or I'll kick you in the butt."

Humorous cards are the favorites among teen-agers and young adults.

For guys there is: "I didn't realize how beautiful you were . . . until I started drinking."

For girls a favorite is: "I may not be rich or beautiful or smart but I have one attractive quality . . . I'll say yes."

For the younger set, there is a proliferation of Peanuts cards, usually featuring Snoopy as the great lover, Lucy as the eternal optimist, and Charlie Brown as the big loser.

Women's Lib seems to have made an impact and there is only a handful of Valentines this year addressed "to my better half."

For those looking for something different, one card has a cowboy saying: "Ah'm sending this Valentine across the miles to yew. If yew won't be my valentine, ah don't know whut ah wull do."

In the next panel the cowboy gets kissed by his horse but the story continues and they all live happily ever after.

One card selling well says: "Darling, I couldn't decide whether to get you what you want or what you need. I know what you want . . . but what you need is a cold shower."

A favorite for men is: "Before I met you I was troubled by wicked thoughts . . . now I enjoy them."

Young Calls For Joint Film Review

Young, who is police board chairman, said he regrets the controversial film, How to Say No to a Rapist, was shown to girls at Esquimalt high school last week by a police constable.

"Someone must take the responsibility of reviewing all kinds of controversial films," said Young.

His daughter was one of the girls who saw the 15-minute movie produced by Fred Storaska, who tells women injury and death can be avoided by playing up to a rapist.

"She (Young's daughter) said there was nothing wrong with the film and that may be true, but there was certainly something wrong with his advice," Young said.

Womens' groups and rape crisis centres across the country criticized the film as dangerous and police in several cities, including Vancouver, banned it.

"I never gave a thought it would be shown by my own department," Young said.

Members of police and school boards should form a film review committee to avoid similar incidents in the future, Young said.

The showing could damage the credibility of the police when it comes to showing other films in the schools, he said, and parents may not consent so readily.

In future, films should not be selected by the police community relations officer alone, Young suggested.

More intensive training should be given at the B.C. Police Academy in community relations and other specialized areas, he said.

Representatives of Status of Women and Rape Relief have also called for extended police training, particularly in the field of rape and rape counselling.

Police must improve their attitudes toward and their handling of rape victims, Rape Relief worker Rowena Heunnisett said Thursday.

She said police receive 10 or 15 minutes training in counselling and management of rape victims.

Police officers saw nothing wrong with Storaska's film because they don't have enough expertise in the field of rape to understand its implications, Heunnisett said.

The film depicts women as passive frail creatures, while showing men as dominant and masterful, she said.

These stereotypes are wrong and Rape Relief has been working hard to destroy them, she said.

Heunnisett, who teaches a self-defence course, said it is easier than most women think to be assertive, verbally or physically, and take control of a rape situation.

Meanwhile, the controversial film has been sent back to Ontario. Constable Paul Hicks, who showed the film, said he was meetimg today with his superiors for a full discussion.

Dock Fire Reward Rejected

International Telephone and Telegraph has rejected an appeal by the Victoria fire department for reward money in connection with last August's $4 million blaze at Ogden Point dock.

Fire chief Eric Simmons said today the giant corporation, the world's 17th largest, has vetoed his suggestion that a reward of between $10,000 and $20,000 be posted.

Simmons felt the reward would induce someone who might know something about the fire into talking.

Unionists Step Up Campaign

Members of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council demonstrated again Thursday against non-union contractors and a spokesman said today the campaign is going to be stepped up.

Council organizer Al McMurray said the organized construction workers are extremely upset over the increased use of non-union contractors.

About 35 placard-carrying union workers demonstrated for the second time in 10 days at the site of construction for a station-firehall addition to the Central Saanich municipal hall. The initial work is being done by Wergeland Construction.

The council members also paraded at the site of an addition to the Royal Oak shopping plaza, where the work is being done by Darwai Consrtruction.

TEST FOR BANK SUSPECT

A 40-year-old James Bay resident was remanded for psychiatric examination when he appeared in provincial court today charged with attempted robbery with violence at the Bank of Nova Scotia main branch Thursday noon.

The charge states he attempted to obtain money from teller Cheryl May Hooker using threats of violence.

Drapery Suspected In Blaze

Heavy window drapes covering an electric baseboard heater is the suspected cause of a $5,500 fire in an Esquimalt apartment overnight Thursday.

A neighbor turned in the alarm at 2:42 a.m. when fire was noticed in the apartment of Donna Fenlon, 358 West Bay Terrace, who was not at home.

Fire damage was confined to the living room area, but Esquimalt firemen reported heavy smoke damage throughout the suite. Owner Wayne Jackson did not carry insurance.

A Victoria apartment caretaker using a chemical extinguisher was credited with squelching a grease fire Thursday in a tenant's kitchen before firefighters reached the scene.

Supper was being prepared in the suite of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Robichaud, 1764 Oak Bay, when a pan of french fries overheated and set fire to cupboards, causing smoke damage in the room. Repairs were estimated at $1,000.

City Retreats On Hospital

City council backed away Thursday from a head-on confrontation with the province over regional hospital plans, but not before salvos were fired at both the Social Credit government and the Capital Regional Hospital Commission.

At least one alderman tried to call the retreat a victory, but when the smoke had cleared it was obvious that City Hall had hit the brakes in the political game of chicken that was being played over the new Helmcken Road hospital and the future of Victoria General.

In committee last week Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Bob Wright won support for a six-part motion urging that the Helmcken project be delayed two months; that the new hospital site be officially labelled a poor choice; that the needs of the western community be reassessed; that determination of the location and number of beds at Helmcken and Victoria General be delayed until the assessment is made; that Victoria General be retained as a community hospital with acute care beds and that the regional hospital committee be stripped of its policy decision-making powers.

But when the planning committee's multiple proposal came before full council, Ald. Wright asked that all but the last two points be dropped.

Council later agreed that policy decision-making should be removed from the hospital planning commission and placed with the hospital board, and that the retention of Victoria General should be endorsed.

Dropped were the proposals regarding the Helmcken project.

Wright said that there was no point in City Hall taking a hard line on Helmcken because Health Minister Bob McClelland had made it abundantly clear recently that the project was going ahead no matter what council thought.

Wright said he originally feared that Victoria General was going to be phased out as the new Helmcken hospital came on stream, but McClelland's statements had allayed those fears.

Last Monday McClelland stated that "It is our intention that the present Victoria General site will remain an important centre for health care for many, many years to come."

Wright said that statement by the minister meant the city had been victorious in its fight to see Victoria General maintained as a hospital with acute care beds and emergency services.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, however, called the fight a debacle, with City Hall once more yielding to intimidation from the provincial government.

Blencoe went on to say that he felt McClelland was not being completely honest about what Victoria General's future really was.

The planning committee's recommendation that the health planning committee should lose its policy-making powers also sparked heated debate, with Ald. Bill McElroy supporting the move while Ald. Larry Ryan and Ald. Murray Glazier termed it an unwarranted attack on the commission.

McElroy said he was tired of catching flack for decisions made by a commission that was not answerable to the public.

Of the commission's 14 members only four are elected officials.

McElroy said he was frustrated by "decisions that are made by little gnomes somewhere who go home and turn on Police Woman while I have to sit up and get the telephone calls. I'd like to watch Police Woman some nights too."

Ryan, however, said the "commission was set up because of the ineptitude of politicians . . . the hospital commission has done a good job and should be commended.

Glazier supported Ryan and said that when the original motion had come forward at last week's committee meeting he'd been outraged by it.

Doctors Want Meeting

Officials of the Victoria Medical Society will seek a meeting with the provincial cabinet to discuss the future of Victoria General Hospital.

Dr. Doug Critchley, president, said the decision to approach the cabinet was made at a special executive committee meeting on Thursday.

Critchley said the doctors intend to stress that construction of a replacement facility on the St. Ann's Academy land is still the best and cheapest solution.

If the cabinet cannot be persuaded, Critchley said the doctors will urge the proposed Helmcken Road hospital be built in a single phase instead of the two phases now planned.

Salvage Rebuke by Mayor

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today an article in Thursday's Times concerning police investigations into the disposal of salvage materials from municipal projects could have serious consequences in prejudicing the outcome of those investigations.

He also rebuked Ald. David Paterson for providing information and commenting on the situation, and dissociated himself from the alderman's published statements.

In the item, Paterson said the investigations to date have indicated that 16 employees of the public works department have taken salvage materials from various municipal projects over a four-year period, and that some of the materials taken have been sold to local firms.

But he said he did not believe police would lay charges because the employees concerned were apparently following a long-established practice at the municipal yard.

Couvelier's official statement today said the wording of his Feb. 7 news release announcing that investigations were under way had been agreed by council members and the police department.

"The phrasing was chosen with a view to informing the public of the situation and avoiding any possible prejudicing of future options pending the completion of the investigation," he said.

"I am disappointed that one alderman would have publicly disclosed some information given in confidence.

"I am very surprised the alderman in question, being an employee of the municipality's solicitors, did not appreciate the possible consequences of his comments.

"The statement as published contains at least one error in fact and I dissociate myself from it.

Buffalo Sabres' Rick Martin was in hospital but Jerry Butler of Toronto Maple Leafs came out today.

Martin was undergoing routine tests following head and neck injuries suffered in a National Hockey League game Thursday night. Martin hit his head and the side of his neck on the ice in the third period of the game in which the Sabres beat New York Rangers 2-0.

Butler was released from hospital today after suffering a concussion Wednesday night. He was knocked unconscious in the first period when his head struck the ice as he tried an off-balance shot at the St. Louis goal. The Leafs beat the Blues 5-4 in the game at Toronto.

At Chamonix, France, John Bowerman, head coach of the United States women's ski team, resigned after the final races in the European portion of the World Cup.

No reasons were given for the resignation but Hank Tauber, director of the U.S. ski team, said: "We knew it was coming for several weeks."

Other U.S. team officials also declined to comment on the resignation but other ski sources said Bowerman left because of personal conflicts with Tauber.

Bowerman, 39, a graduate of the University of Oregon and the French national ski school, had been head coach of the American women skiers for two years.

He trained the American women for the 1976 Winter Olympic Games in Innsbruck and for last week's world championships in Garmisch Partenkirchen, Germany. The skiers achieved only mediocre results.

"A lot of girls might have problems with John's approach," said Christin Cooper of Sun Valley, Idaho, the American women's slalom champion. "He's so frank and straightforward in the way he coaches and in the way he handles you."

Cleveland Barons have hired John Karr, 48, as interim president of the National Hockey League club following the resignation of Peter Larsen.

Larsen's resignation, reported to be asked for by owners George and Gordon Gund, was accepted effective immediately. Karr, who has been vice-president of finance and administration for the Cole National Corp. of Cleveland for the last 10 years, assumes his duties today.

Karr said his responsibilities will be confined to the business area, with general manager Harry Howell running the hockey operations.

Casals Bows To Turnbull

SEATTLE (AP) — Fifth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia defeated fourth-seeded Rosie Casals of the United States 5-7, 6-1, 6-2 Thursday night in a quarter-final match of a $100,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

In another quarter-final match, third-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands defeated sixth-seeded Kerry Reid of the U.S. 6-4, 6-1.

In an earlier singles match, American Marita Redondo beat Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa 1-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Hawks Fail To Hold Lead

By The Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks just could not live with prosperity in their National Hockey League clash with Montreal Canadiens at the Forum on Thursday night.

The Hawks were holding on to a slender 2-1 lead in the third period when Ivan Boldirev slid his 22nd goal of the season by Ken Dryden at 13:08 giving the Hawks a 3-1 lead.

Nineteen seconds later, Pierre Larouche scored to make it 3-2 and 12 seconds after that, Pierre Bouchard's screened shot from the left point eluded a screened Tony Esposito to give Montreal a 3-3 tie in one of five NHL games.

In other action, Boston Bruins defeated Detroit Red Wings 5-3, Philadelphia Flyers clipped Vancouver Canucks 5-2, Buffalo Sabres blanked New York Rangers 2-0 and Atlanta Flames upset Los Angeles Kings 4-2. (See summaries, standings on page 28).

"I think we got a little excited after that third goal," said Hawks' coach Bob Pulford, whose club came into the game with a seven-game winning streak.

"We might have been better off if we hadn't scored that third goal. We were trying to make sure of everything once we got that third goal instead of playing the way we had been.

"We were trying to get very deliberate. When you take that extra second, you get checked. Instead of moving the puck and relaxing, we wanted to move the puck so bad we got deliberate.

"They've still got their streak going and so do we."

The Hawks are 11-1-2 in their last 14 outings while the Canadiens are unbeaten in their last 21 games, just two short of the all-time NHL mark set by Boston Bruins during the 1940-41 season.

The Canadiens came close in 1974-75 and 1976-77 to tying the mark, but in both cases, Montreal was beaten in its 22nd game.

The Canadiens did manage to extend their home-ice unbeaten string to 16 games, the longest in the NHL this season.

In Detroit, Bob Miller scored twice to key a four-goal rally by the Bruins in the second period and Boston went on to its fourth win in as many meetings against Detroit this season.

The Red Wings, who have not beaten the Bruins in 10 games in Detroit since Dec. 22, 1973, blew a 3-0 lead as Nick Libett scored in the first period and Vaclav Nedomansky and Reed Larson scored in the third.

Mike Milbury got the first Boston goal at 7:49 of the middle session and then Miller scored twice in a 14-second span to tie the score.

Gregg Sheppard fired what proved to be the winning goal at 15:17 of the period which saw Boston direct 32 shots at Detroit goaltender Jimmy Rutherford.

In Philadelphia, Gary Dornhoefer scored two goals and Orest Kindrachuk collected three assists to pace Philadelphia's triumph as the Flyers maintained their home-ice mastery over the Canucks and pulled into a first-place tie with New York Islanders in the Patrick Division.

The Flyers now have won 20 and lost just once at home against Vancouver. The last time the Canucks won at the Spectrum was Nov. 21, 1974.

Goalie Don Edwards blocked 25 shots to record his third shutout of the season in the Sabres' win over the Rangers.

"We were both going for the puck," explained Farrish. "I didn't even see what happened. The whistle blew. I looked around and he looked as though he was having convulsions."

In Los Angeles, Tom Lysiak scored the winning goal with 2:11 remaining and defenceman Richard Mulhern added an empty-net goal with 31 seconds to go, giving the Flames their first triumph in four games against the Kings this season.

Flames' goalie Dan Bouchard blocked a rare penalty shot attempt by the Kings' Hartland Monahan with 10:23 left in the third period withthe score tied 1-1 and then Ken Houston gave Atlanta a 2-1 lead with 7:53 remaining in the game, connecting on a deflection which eluded Kings' goalie Rogie Vachon.

But Los Angeles tied the score 51 seconds later on Butch Goring's 26th goal of the season, setting the stage for Lysiak's winner.

New Westminster Coach Suspended for 25 Games

CALGARY (CP) — Ernie McLean, owner-coach of New Westminster Bruins of the Western Canada Hockey League, has been suspended for 25 games by the league for hitting an official during a game last Sunday.

"The suspension is the result of McLean striking WCHL official John Fitzgerald during the first period of a game between McLean's Bruins and Portland Winter Hawks, played in Portland Feb. 5," WCHL president Ed Chynoweth said Thursday

"It is quite obvious from the report I have received from the referee as well as our supervisor of officials, Al Paradice, who was in attendance, that McLean did in fact strike the official and that he (McLean) receive a suspension as serious as this."

Chynoweth said McLean would be eligible to return to his duties with the Bruins at the start of the WCHL playoffs.

"Our league has long been accused of protecting either our coaches or more particularly owner-coaches, but there is no way one coach or one franchise is bigger than the league.

"I can live with the so-called violence on ice, as projected by the media, but when it comes to our officials, qualified or unqualified, I look at things much differently."

Calling the suspension the most serious he has levied in five years as WCHL president, Chynoweth said McLean has the right to appeal to the board of governors of the league, composed of 11 other team owners.

It's expected that Doug Sauter, coach of Abbotsford Flyers of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and a sometimes-assistant to McLean, will be behind the bench tonight when Brandon Wheat Kings open a tour of the Western Division in New Westminster.

The Wheat Kings visit Victoria Cougars Saturday night and move on to Seattle Sunday and Portland Monday.

In Abbotsford, where he was attending a British Columbia Junior League game, McLean said he planned to appeal the suspension to the board of governors.

He said the WCHL rule book says a team is subject only to a fine when a team official or player is guilty of striking a referee or linesman.

McLean denied striking Fitzgerald.

"I know what happened but I'm not going to say because I don't want to get any player involved," he said.

FOSTER WALKS OUT IN FIGHT

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Light heavyweight boxer Bob Foster left Denmark on Friday in a blaze of scandal and controversy after quitting during a Thursday night fight.

Danish promoter Mogens Palle said he was withholding part of Foster's purse after the the Albuquerque, N.M., deputy sheriff gave up after five rounds of a scheduled eight-rounder against Mustapha Wassaja of Uganda.

The 39-year-old former world champion was booed by the Danish crowd and climbed from the ring as programs and other objects showered down upon him, hurled by outraged fans.

Foster hardly put up any fight, claiming a hand injury.

Cards' Owner Fires Coryell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A stalemate between Billy Bidwill, owner of the National Football League's St. Louis Cardinals, and coach Don Coryell was ended today when Bidwell fired him.

Bidwill made the announcement in the club's offices at a news conference not attended by Coryell. Bidwill said the settlement was reached Thursday night.

"Don Coryell did many positive things for the St. Louis franchise. He is a winner and we are grateful for his help in making us one of the most exciting teams in the NFL the past few seasons.

"We had to reach an agreement, because we believe that the circumstances of the past two months would prevent Don from becoming an effective coach for us in 1978."

There was no immediate announcement on a successor to Coryell, 53, who directed the Cardinals to a 42-29-1 record in five seasons and to two National Conference East titles.

Dam's Break Interupts Hope Classic

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A small dam collapsed today, sending a three-foot high wall of water across the Indian Wells Country Club golf course on which former president Gerald Ford was playing.

No injuries were reported.

The flood caused a suspension of play in the third round of the 90-hole, $225,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Ford, who lives in Palm Springs, was playing in the pro-am section of the tournament which is being played on four courses in the area, including Indian Wells.

Financial Woes Hit AHL Club

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Hampton Gulls of the American Hockey League folded today after general manager John Brophy disclosed that all efforts to keep the team alive had failed because of insoluble financial problems.

"This is just awful, awful, the worst day of my life," Brophy said.

"We thought we had a buyer for the club Thursday, but the more we got into the financial books, the more he became discouraged, and finally he decided that he could not go through with the purchase."

Debts not previously known to have been incurred by the Gulls under the ownership of Charles Wornom, Hampton businessman, were revealed at the time of the announcement.

Hampton's folding left the AHL with eight teams. The league office now must make over a schedule already disrupted by Nova Scotia's postponement of numerous home games until its new arena is ready to open.

The Gulls had been scheduled to play Springfield Indians tonight at the Hampton Coliseum, but the game will not be played, Brophy said.

Caps' Best A New Guest

John Best, general manager of Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League, has joined the list of head table speakers for the 11th annual Sports Celebrity Dinner scheduled for March 13 at the Empress Hotel.

Best, a former player for Liverpool of the English League's first division and Dallas Tornado of the NASL, had a successful three-year stint as coach of Seattle Sounders before joining the Whitecaps in late 1976.

Among the other guests for the dinner are professional wrestler Gene Kiniski; Jerry Tagge, quarterback for B.C. Lions; and Dick Vertlieb, general manager of Seattle Mariners.

Tickets are still available for the dinner and may be obtained at the sports departments of the Victoria Times, Daily Colonist, Sportscaster, CJVI and CFAX.

Leafs Rally To Nudge A's

Esquimalt Maple Leafs improved their grip on first place in the South Island Big Six Hockey League by scoring the only goal in the third period Thursday night to edge Victoria Athletics 5-4 at Pearkes Arena.

In the other league game, Western Homes Buckaroos tripped Juan de Fuca Merchants, 7-2.

Rob Coldwell scored his second goal of the game at 6:10 of the third period to produce the victory for Esquimalt while single tallies were added by Kerry Brewster, Randy Krantz and Dale McLachlan. Ross Swanton, John Entzminger, Brian Hamilton and Steve Buckley replied for second-place Athletics.

Doug Berger hammered in three goals to spark the Bucks while Norm Allen added a pair and singles were contributed by Steve Leatham and Gord Sturtridge. Bryce Charlong and Barry McLachlan countered for Merchants.

Edwards Shooting For $1 Million Pact

HAMILTON (CP) — Running back Jimmy Edwards wants $1 million over five years from Hamilton Tiger-Cats and prospective new team owner Harold Ballard said the demand may not be unreasonable.

"I'm going to have a football team and I can't fool the fans with poor quality," said Ballard, owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League. "That's $200,000 a year and it may be worked out."

The Canadian Football League's executive committee meets in Toronto next week to discuss and possibly ratify Ballard's purchase of the team from Michael DeGroote.

"I'll have to talk to Ralph Sazio (Ticats president). I understand that under the previous owner (DeGroote), he had a budget he had to stretch out like an elastic. I said I wanted Edwards and I'll have to take a serious look at this."

The Ticat running back said he is worth every penny and more than Anthony Davis, who had a five-year, $1 million contract with Toronto Argonauts. Davis, after a disappointing first season, left the CFL after buying out the remainder of his contract.

"I don't have too many years left to make it," Edwards said. "I have no background or education to fall back on. I have a lot to lose and there is always the chance of getting hurt. What happens then?"

Edwards rushed for 1,581 yards last year, was named the outstanding player in the league and also was a CFL all-star.

The 25-year-old Edwards denied that asking for $1 million was, in effect, asking for his release from the Ticats to take a crack at the National Football League.

In his native Oklahoma City, Edwards said he is known for his past deeds in high school and college, but outside of the city, he is unknown.

"It's a matter of self-pride," Edwards said. "I'm known in Oklahoma City but I'm not known in Kansas City, New York or anywhere else. A $1 million contract makes a difference. With a $1 million contract, you're known."

Edwards is in the option year of his contract and if no agreement is reached, he will be paid $27,000 next season.

Andrew Benson of Houston, Edwards's agent, confirmed the figure Thursday night while attending a sports celebrities dinner in Toronto. Edwards was scheduled to appear at the dinner but cancelled out because of the flu.

"We're looking for at least a seven-figure contract for five years, similar to A.D. (Davis)," Benson said. "That's the minimum."

Salmon Action Slow In Most Island Spots

With only one notable exception, salmon fishing around Vancouver Island has been fair to poor during the past few days.

A spot about one mile north of Big Finger Island near Nanaimo has turned "red hot" and just about every fisherman going out to the area is coming back with a limit. The chinooks are averaging five to six pounds but a few have tipped scales to 10.

Most catches have been made on deep lines in about 200 feet of water using white, blue and white or green and white hootchies. Strip has also been productive and most of the action has been concentrated right at daybreak and dusk.

Northwest Bay has also been good but seals in the area have added a little spice to the game. More than one angler has played a large salmon almost to the boat and landed just the head.

Around the Greater Victoria area, a few grilse are showing in Finlayson Arm and a few chinooks to 12 pounds have been boated off Bamberton and in Tod Inlet using strip, 200 feet of wire line and a planer.

Anyone getting out to Constance Bank recently has been catching chinooks to 20 pounds on strip, hootchies or Squirts trolled close to the bottom. But with this squaally weather, getting too far offshore can be a dicy proposition in a smaller boat.

Brian Waddell was one of the few lucky fishermen at Pedder Bay in recent days. He came back with several chinooks to 10 pounds from the vicinity of Christopher Point after discovering anchovies and deep lines were a good combination.

At Becher Bay, chinooks to 22 pounds have turned up between Bedford Island and the Trap Shack. Fishermen trolling either strip or minnows with 80 to 120 feet of line and up to two pounds of lead have fared best.

Likewise, action has been "pretty fair" off Sooke with waters off both Secretary Island and The Bluffs yielding chinooks to 10 pounds on deeply-trolled strip or green and white hootchies.

Other up-Island spots producing fair salmon catches have been Sansum Narrows (chinooks to 14 pounds) and both Willow and Butler's points at Campbell River (chinooks to 18 pounds). Mooching has brought the best success at Sansum while the Campbell River fishermen have experienced most luck on slowly-trolled Grey Ghost bucktails.

Steelhead anglers are starting to experience fair success in several Vancouver Island streams — but the over-all picture is far from good.

A few of these scrappy searun rainbows have been caught around 11-Mile and the Harris Creek junction on the San Juan River and several have been taken around the Riverbottom, Skutz Falls and Stoltz Pool areas of the Cowichan River.

Further up-Island, The Big Qualicum, Gold, Campbell and Quinsam systems have been productive.

Burnaby To Face DataTech

VANCOUVER — Burnaby Bullets nudged North Shore Mountaineers 94-90 Thursday to sweep the best-of-five Dogwood Senior Men's Basketball League playoff series.

Bullets now meet Victoria DataTech in a best-of-three series for the British Columbia senior "A" title and a berth in the national championship tournament in Regina next month.

The opening game of the provincial series is scheduled for Feb. 26 in Vancouver. Action resumes at the University of Victoria's McKinnon gymnasium March 4 and, if necessary, concludes March 5.

Jackson Cup Play Resumes

Defending-champion Victoria Athletics of the first division will face Cosmopolitan Royals of the second division as second-round play in the annual Vancouver Island Soccer League's Jackson Cup competition opens Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Game time is 2:15 p.m.

Athletics' coach Brian Robinson has essentially a young team sprinkled with a few veterans, including George Pakos and Ron Thompson. The Athletics are currently running sixth in the division.

Royals, only two points off first place in the second division, are getting good service from a mixture of young and old players, including goaltender Doug Higgins and link Drew Porter.

A total of 15 matches are scheduled on Sunday. Starting times and fields will appear in the Sports Menu on Saturday.

Vikings Host Japan Stars

University of Victoria Vikings will tackle the touring Japan University All-Stars in an exhibition men's volleyball game starting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the McKinnon gymnasium.

The visitors will also play games against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and B.C. Olympics in Vancouver after leaving Victoria.

Those Technical Changes Pay Off for Arnie, Watson

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson says he's been having trouble with his swing, so he's made some changes, while Arnold Palmer has made a few adjustments in his putting.

The moves must have benefitted both golfers Thursday because they were among the leaders heading into today's third round of the 90-hole, $225,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

However, the lead was held by unheralded Bill Rogers, now in his fourth year on the pro tour, who shot a 67 Thursday to put him at eight-under-par 136 for 36 holes.

Miller Barber and Watson, who shot a 68 Thursday, are one stroke behind Rogers. Barber had one of five 67s on the day.

Palmer, who had a 70, joined a group of seven at five-under 139, including Lee Trevino who had a 67.

Gusting winds of 65 kilometres an hour hampered some of the 128 pros who played the four courses used in the tourney. Luckily, the players escaped the rainstorm that hit downtown Palm Springs, about 20 miles away.

Watson, the top money-winner of 1977 who has won two tournaments already this year, said the winds "came from all directions." He managed, however, to make five birdies on the back nine, including the final three holes.

"My swing worked fine for nine holes," said Watson, who plans to leave the tour the next three weeks. "I have to test it out the next few days to really know."

Technically, Watson said he is "keeping the club lower, taking it away from the ball."

Palmer, who has won five times here, jokingly said: "I'm becoming the world's finest putter.

"I really am stroking the putts. I changed my putting stroke a little bit. It probably looks the same, but I'm not breaking my left wrist down as fast as I was."

Bruno Lends Presence To Vancouver Boat Show

AROUND OUR SHORES

Actor Bruno Gerussi is honorary commodore of this year's Vancouver International Boat Show which gets under way today at the Pacific National Exhibition.

Boaters and landlubbers alike know him through his starring role in the television series The Beachcombers which, in its sixth season, centres around the log salvage business at Gibson's Landing.

He'll be on hand for today's opening ceremonies at 7 p.m. when Deputy Prime Minister Grace McCarthy will do the honors.

The actor, also known for his series Celebrity Cooks, will also appear at one of the nightly cooking demonstrations.

The Vancouver show has now been recognized as being in the big time. Last October it was accepted into the prestigious International Federation of Boat Show Organizers, which has its base in London, Eng.

Some 225 exhibitors will be taking part, showing the latest in boats and marine-allied equipment. The show will be open 6 to 10:30 p.m. on weekdays, 1 to 10:30 p.m. on Saturdays and 1 to 6 p.m. on Sundays. It ends Feb. 19.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club starts its winter series racing again this weekend, staging a six-miler in waters off Sidney on Sunday. The start gun goes at 10 a.m.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association will have two around-the-buoys races in waters off Oak Bay Marina on Sunday, beginning at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Many of the boats taking part were out last Sunday in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's long-distance race. Sailed in winds that gusted up to 48 knots, the race was not without its casualties.

Gillian Pugh's Flattery was overcanvassed for the conditions and was towed in by Ted Trenholme's Impatience, which retired after breaking her spreader.

In division two competition it was Peter Young's Spice, followed by Dennis Robinson's Hobo, Gerry Porter's Flying Lady, Dick Readshaw's Massilia II, David Lister's Circe, Jim Robinson's Aratei, Gary Jacobi's Salty Dream, Reg Skaret's Gavia, Ron Jewula's Skye and Keith Illingworth's Linnet.

The club's dinghy sailors will have Laser series racing again on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Charles Simpson won the first of two races completed last weekend, runners-up being Barry Wright and Chris Anstey. The second time around it was Dave Teece, followed by Doug Taylor-Lee and Barry.

Henry Niezen is the new commodore of the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association that races every other Sunday in waters off Tulista Park in Sidney. Henry reports the club will be meeting with Saanich Peninsula Recreation Commission officials to discuss plans to extend its dinghy enclosure in the park and erect a small clubhouse.

David Myerscough, who started the club, is now vice-commodore, his wife Jean has taken over memberships while Henry's wife, Agnes, is treasurer. Rounding out the slate are fleet captain Jim Sereda, yard master Bruce Ingimundson and secretary Alison Bullock.

The Victoria Canoe Club is planning a trip on the Sooke River this Sunday. Members will gather at 10 a.m. at the Sooke Flats. For further details they should phone Allan Rover at 478-5187.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish helped Harvey Dunahee capture inaugural award in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Harvey collected men's fivepin laurels with 288-267-300 — 855 series in Sunday League at Wilson's Bowladrome during 16th week of 15th annual competition.

Sigurdson Choice In PCCA Playdown

By Canadian Press

Gary Sigurdson of Surrey, a finalist last year in the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's playoffs, will skip one of eight rinks which begin play tonight at the Vancouver Curling Club in the annual shoot-out leading to the British Columbia final.

Sigurdson was defeated last year by Roy Vinthers of Vancouver, who went on to win the B.C. title.

Vinthers was eliminated in zone competition this year, making Sigurdson's foursome as one of the favorites to capture the PCCA title. The winner meets the Interior champion here Monday in a best-of-three B.C. final.

Sigurdson, 31, also lost in the 1976 PCCA final to Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver, perennial provincial men's champion.

Sparkes, 39, has been a B.C. champion four times, including two trips to the Canadian final skipping his own rink.

The six other rinks in the PCCA are skipped by Steve Skillings, Keith Dagg and Tim Horrigan, all of Victoria, John Munro of Abbotsford, Brock Giles of North Vancouver and Dr. Ken Neuman of Vancouver.

Skillings, 22, has gained the reputation of a giant killer wih his mates Murray Walker, Don Nemeth and Kim Browning and eliminated Sparkes last year.

The PCCA is a double-knockout competition with one draw tonight, three draws Saturday and another Sunday, with the possibility of a second Sunday draw if one rink doesn't go through undefeated.

In Prince George, only four rinks were unbeaten after Thursday's first day of the British Columbia Curling Association Interior championship. Six of the 18 rinks which started play were eliminated, including two of seven zone winners.

Going undefeated into today's action were Pete Sherba of Prince George, and zone winners Darrel Will of Kamloops, Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna and Peter Delver of Prince Rupert.

Rinks eliminated with two losses were zone winners Doug Chilton of Vernon and Ralph Will of Sparwood, plus Don Bogie of Kamloops, Mike Shelest and Mel Dalziel of Prince George, and Rick Shymanski of Mackenzie.

Junior Champion

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Murray Fulkerth of Cranbrook did it the hard way but survived a playoff to win the British Columbia Curling Association junior men's championship Thursday night.

Tang Rink Captures Seniors Curling Title

Tang defeated clubmate Gordon Walker 8-6 in the "A" Event final but neither will forget the eighth end.

With Tang holding having shot rock and a two-point edge and Walker having the hammer and four biters when Tang went down to throw his last rock, Tang, in attempting to guard the shot rock, slid through the rings. But Walker wasn't equal to the task, came out narrow, Tang stole a single and was three up playing the ninth.

That was game over as matters turned out. Walker got a single in the ninth but was run out of rocks in the 10th.

It was Tang's fifth victory plus a bye into the semifinals where he defeated Laurie Perlette earlier in the day.

Ed McDormand of Victoria Club defeated Reg Yells of Victoria to take the "B" Event championship, Ralph Stevenson of Glen Meadows downed Kels McMurdo of Vancouver in "C" Event and Tom McDonnell of Surrey won "D" Event over Wally Barkley of New Westminster.

Winning rinks follow:

"A" EVENT

"B" EVENT

"C" EVENT

New Races For B.C. Breds

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Jockey Club announced Thursday that four new $10,000-added races, all exclusively for B.C. bred horses, are included in the 1978 thoroughbred stakes schedule for Exhibition Park.

The stakes races are the Fantasy for two-year-old fillies, the Prospect for two-year-colts, the Captain Cook for three-year-old colts and the Liberation for three-year-old fillies.

The racing schedule, which begins April 10, will include 54 stakes races and more than $900,000 in purses.

Snooker Final For Thorburn

LONDON (CP) - Canadian champion Cliff Thorburn of Toronto, down 3-1 at the interval, defeated world champion John Spencer of England 5-3 in the semi-final of the Masters snooker championship Thursday.

His opponent in the final will be Irish champion Alex Higgins, who defeated Welsh title-holder Ray Reardon 5-1 in the other best-of-nine semi-final.

Thorburn, a Victoria product, evened the match at 3-3 by sinking all the colors and he went ahead for the first time when he took the seventh frame after trailing by 55 points.

Frame scores:

Thorburn beat Spencer 5-3—55-63, 19-105, 64-47, 20-66, 72-29, 72-33, 72-59, 64-25.

Higgins beat Reardon 5-1—74-37, 95-9, 72-17, 78-25, 40-72, 91-6.

Horgan Sparks Bakers Over A's

John Horgan fired 23 points Thursday night to lead Little Giant Bakeries to an 84-73 upset victory over leading Victoria Athletics in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Forrest Partington added 20 points and Greg McInnes chipped in 16 for the Giants, who improved their record to 5-11.

Manager Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fred Whitacre has been named general manager of the Vancouver franchise returning to the Pacific Coast League, Harry Ornest, general manager of the baseball club, has announced.

Whitacre, 37, was general manager of Hawaii Islandrs which won the PCL's West Division last season and lost to Phoenix Giants, the East Division winners, in a post-season playoff.

Appeal Rejected

BALTIMORE (AP) — A bid for reinstatement by Jesse Davidson, former North American riding champion who was convicted of race fixing, has been turned down by the Maryland Racing Commission.

The panel's thoroughbred board voted 3-to-2 against allowing the jockey to ride again.

ALBRECHT MAKES SWITCH TO SOCCER

TORONTO (CP) — J. I. Albrecht, who quit as director of player personnel for Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League two weeks ago, was appointed general manager of Toronto Metros-Croatia of the North American Soccer League Thursday.

Although his soccer background is skimpy, Albrecht said he regards the job as mainly an organizational one and added he will be involved in all phases of the team's operation.

"I could have been back in the National Football League three seconds after I resigned from the Argos but I wanted to stay in Toronto and I'm impressed with the possibilities here," Albrecht said.

Albrecht has been involved with five NFL teams—Oakland, Dallas, Denver, New England and San Francisco—as well as Toronto and Montreal Alouettes of the CFL. He also helped run the Harlem Globetrotters for a year.

Injured Whaler Out For Season

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — New England Whalers announced Thursday that right wing Tom Webster, who underwent back surgery earlier this week, will be out for the rest of the World Hockey Association weason.

Webster has been out of the lineup since late November.

In 20 games, Webster had 15 goals and five assists for 20 points.

Bay Area Clubs to Stay

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Oakland and San Francisco parties trying to solve the Bay Area's baseball problem ran out of time Thursday, so two teams will remain this season in the sport's most troubled spot.

"I believe an honest effort was made to bridge the gap," said Robert T. Nahas, the Oakland Coliseum president.

Nahas met with San Francisco Mayor George Moscone, National League president Chub Feeney and Bob Lurie, co-owner of San Francisco Giants. The meeting was what a spokesman for the mayor called "a last-ditch effort" to agree on a settlement under which Oakland A's would move to Denver and the Giants would play some home games in Oakland as well as Candlestick Park in San Francisco.

"The legal complications and issues still divided us so greatly, and with the time element so short, a solution couldn't be worked out," Nahas said.

Moscone said: "I think you can put to rest any further ideas there might be about the A's leaving or any splitting of the San Francisco franchise."

Soon after the meeting in Moscone's office, the Giants announced they intend to play all 1978 games at Candlestick.

There have been too few paying fans in the Bay Area, of course, which is why the A's were put up for sale. The teams' combined attendance last year was 1.2 million.

The possibility of the Giants splitting their time at home between Candlestick and the Oakland Coliseum was raised after A's owner Charles Finley attempted to sell his club. He has been unsuccessful.

"All negotiations regarding the possibility of Giant games in the Oakland Coliseum have ended," the Giants said in a brief statement.

Finley had agreed to sell his club to Denver oilman Marvin Davis for $12 million. But the Coliseum filed suit to block the purchase because of the 10 years remaining on Finley's contract with the ballpark.

Coliseum officials had indicated, however, that if they would be willing to compromise

TAYLOR, SKILLINGS TOP SEEDS

John Taylor and Sandra Skillings, both of Vancouver, are top-ranked singles players in the Vancouver Island Open badminton championships which get underway tonight at both the Racquet Club of Victoria and the Cordova Bay Club.

The tourney, which starts at 7, resumes at 8 a.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday.

All Sunday play, including the championship finals, will take place at Cordova Bay.

Wayne MacDonnell and Vic Conley of Vancouver are rated first in the men's doubles while Debbie Smith of Victoria and Skillings are ranked tops in the women's pairs.

Spiced by Salt, Braves in Big Rally

Belmont Braves used a pinch of Salt to add some extra sting while downing Spectrum 82-75 in a Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League on Thursday.

Steve Salt fired 23 points to lead the attack as Braves rallied to overcome a 42-33 half-time deficit. The score was 58-58 at the three-quarter mark and Braves finally pulled away in the final quarter.

Steve Berry added 20 points for Belmont while Dave Shokar (26) and Rick Clark (20) set the pace for second-place Spectrum, now 6-3.

The win improved Belmont's record to 9-1 and improved their hold on first place in the "A" Division.

In girls' league play, Reynolds Roadrunners tripped Victoria Tigers 53-32, Parkland Panthers mauled Esquimalt Dockettes 41-29 and Spectrum downed Belmont Tomahawks, 45-33.

Linda Wharf sank 17 points to lead the Reynolds attack, which produced its 11th victory without a loss. Sandy Lewis set the pace for Tigers with 15 points.

Stasia Gallagher notched 20 points to lead Parkland, which upped its season mark to 9-2.

Spectrum was sparked by a 15-point effort from Heather Boyd and Lori Jackson topped Belmont scorers with 14.

Roadrunners are now eight points ahead of second place Spectrum in Division "A" while Parkland and idle Mt. Douglas Ramblers are deadlocked for first place in Division "B".

Trios Win Again

Oak Bay Trios bounced Esquimalt Legion 4-1 Thursday during Patterson Division action in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

The win was the second in as many nights for Trios, who are now one point behind second-place Saanich Braves.

SIGN HOOD

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pitcher Don Hood has signed a two-year contract with Cleveland Indians. Financial terms of the pact were not announced. Hood, who will start his fourth year with the club, had a 2-1 record in 1977 and a 3.00 earned-run average.

HADL WILL RETIRE

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach O.A. (Bum) Phillips has confirmed that reserve quarterback John Hadl, one of the National Football League's all-time leading passers, is retiring after 16 seasons in the league. Phillips said Hadl, 37, will accept a job as an assistant coach at the University of Kansas, his alma mater.

High Winds Force World Cup Postponment

CHAMONIX, France (CP) — A men's downhill race in the World Cup series was postponed today and rescheduled for Saturday because of high winds, particularly on the upper quarter of the 3,563-metre course.

The downhill will be run Saturday morning and the regularly-scheduled slalom will follow Saturday afternoon.

Canadians had improved times in practice runs for the downhill. Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., was the fastest twice and Ked Read of Calgary and Steve Podborski of Toronto had also posted fast times.

Before The Judge

A preliminary hearing into a charge of second-degree murder against a 33-year-old man began Thursday in Victoria provincial court before Judge Fred Green.

Ervin Ray Beebe is charged in the death of 23-year-old James Struik, who died Dec. 18 following a knifing incident near the Golden Bear Tavern, 2280 Beacon, Sidney.

The incident apparently stemmed from an argument over a pool table at the tavern.

A no-publication order has been granted in the hearing, which is scheduled for two days and will resume this morning.

A 42-year-old man was fined $500 after pleading guilty to ripping a telephone receiver from a pay phone because he couldn't get through to his wife in Montreal.

Kenneth Roy Henry Tidbury, 681 Admirals, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage and Mulligan stayed proceedings against a jointly-accused man.

Mulligan said Tidbury went to the Gorge shopping plaza, where he tore the receiver from the phone, put it in his pocket and drove off. The damage, he said, was estimated by B.C. Tel at $32.50.

Mulligan also told the court Tidbury had a previous conviction for the same offence, on March 18, 1976, when he was handed a suspended sentence and placed on four months probation.

Defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof told the court his client was having marital problems and was trying to get through on long distance and couldn't.

Tidbury, who asked Alder if he could say something, said his wife had "kidnapped" their child and "I was trying to get through to Montreal." He admitted he had had too much to drink and "I just went crazy."

Juvenile Sex Sentence

A 25-year-old Ladysmith man was sentenced in Victoria county court Thursday to two years less a day in jail for sexual intercourse with a girl under the age of 14.

Bradley David Lockhart was found guilty earlier of the offence, which occurred March 13, 1976.

He has a criminal record involving three assaults, twice obstructing a policeman, breaking and entering and possession of a weapon as well as driving offences and breaches of probation.

Court was told his problem is alcohol but Judge Peter Millward said that is "no excuse whatsoever." He said he was taking into account the fact that the girl was "sexually experienced" before the offence, Lockhart's good work history and his criminal record.

He told Lockhart "there will be no rehabilitation until you decide you wish to be rehabilitated" and added that the principal ground in sentencing him was deterrence to him and to others who might find themselves involved in a similar offence.

Poets To Read

A series of free public readings by notable Canadian poets will feature Alexander Hutchison at the University of Victoria Feb. 15.

Hutchison will read from Link-light and his forthcoming book, Deep-Tap Tree, starting at 12:30 p.m. in Clearihue 106.

Upcoming in March are readings by Ralph Gustafson, winner of the Governor General's Award in 1974, Sean Virgo and John Colombo.

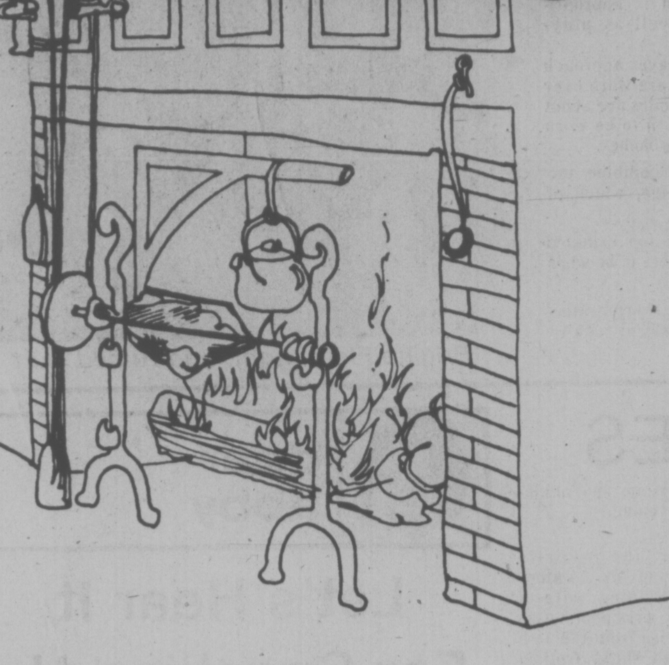
open-hearth cooking



Real Roasted Meat Means an Open Fire

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Let's face it: open-hearth cookery is not something we take seriously. Real cookery, we believe, is done on the kitchen stove.

Let us not forget, however, that the kitchen range — as such — did not come into general use in North America until about 100 years ago. Thanks to this invention, though, the great craft of roasting (the cooking of meats before an open hearth) has all but disappeared.

If you don't know, roast meat has a lightly caramelized crust. A juicy interior and an intensely meaty flavor. This combination can only be obtained through the artful application of direct (open-fire) heat. What we call roasts today, our great-grandparents correctly called baked meats.

The roasting of meat is an art: if the heat is not intense enough, the meat's juices will ooze out. If the heat is too high, though, the meat's outside will be charred before its inside is done.

Even the choice of fuel for the fire is critical. Because the meat is perfumed with the fragrance of the burning wood, the selection of firewood cannot be made only on the basis of the fuel's burning qualities.

The two most basic tools were the swinging crane (which — by altering the distance between the pot and the flame — could provide any temperature desired) and the rotating spit, for roasting. The latter could be as simple as a stout string drawn lengthwise through a bird or small roast, securely tied and suspended from a peg on the mantle so the meat would be positioned properly before the fire.

Roasts and fowl come in such a variety of shapes and consistencies that it's difficult to give precise roasting directions. In general, though, larger pieces of meat require a good-sized, clear fire. Once that appetizing crust has formed on the meat's surface, the spit must be moved a small distance away from the blaze so the meat can continue cooking.

A small bird, on the other hand, should be roasted by a small, quick fire and will usually be perfectly done by the time the crust has formed. A steak should be propped upright in a folding grill quite close to the fire and need only to be turned once.

Many old-time recipes say to baste the meat with butter, but others opt for lard. Regardless of what the recipes say, however, frequent basting is understood.

How can you tell when a roast is done? The surest guide is the change in its texture: during roasting, a chunk of meat's raw flabbiness slowly gives way to firmness. With practice, you'll be able to recognize the desired degree of "doneness" simply by poking the meat with your finger.

New Mouthwash Will Fight Decay

WINNIPEG (CP) — New mouthwashes currently under development will improve future oral hygiene, Dr. John Douglas Spouge has told the annual convention of the Manitoba Dental Association.

Dr. Spouge, head of the University of British Columbia's department of oral medicine, said current mouthwashes are useless in the prevention of gum disease. However, future mouthwashes now under development, probably will be able to prevent such disease by retarding the formation of plaque. He said these new mouthwashes should be on the market in five to 10 years.

Dr. Spouge said about 70 per cent of of the entire population eventually gets peridontal disease, and statistically, gum disease is one of the most widespread of diseases among modern man. He said the incidence of tooth decay is heaviest in the nine-to-20 age bracket, and gum disease begins where decay leaves off.

Peridontal disease is reversible, and Dr. Spouge said the profession is most interested now in promoting prevention. Good oral hygiene is the best way to prevent peridontal disease, he said.

Watch Out for Condominiums

By LYNNE GORDON

Oh, those tantalizing condominium ads! Your very own home — clean, comfortable and affordable. And low, low maintenance costs! Sounds almost too good to be true. And that's when you should watch out!

There's a lot of paperwork involved in buying a condominium — much more so than in buying a private house. It helps to have a lawyer who knows something about condominiums. You should make sure at the outset whether or not the condominium is registered. You won't be able to get title to your property until the project is registered with the provincial government. In British Columbia, the developer can't sell the units until the building is registered and almost complete. In other provinces, condominium owners are often wooed and signed up before registration and project completion. If your condominium isn't registered, you will be paying rent which may or may not be applied against your downpayment. If the developer has trouble selling the units, he may decide not to register the project but turn it into an apartment building and you may wind up as a tenant. In Ontario, a buyer's money must be held in trust before registration but this may not be true in other provinces.

Condominiums have been the subject of a great deal of bad publicity over the past few years. Much of this criticism is aimed at low building standards. Certainly, there has been the temptation for some developers to turn a quick buck at the expense of quality. Apartment buildings were recycled almost overnight to become condominium apartments with thin walls and leaky roofs.

A buyer has very little information about the quality of the building he moves into. In one condominium in the City of Mississauga in Ontario, the roof was falling apart and required $180,000 to repair it. Normally, this repair would be considered part of the depreciation of the building and each unit owner would have to pay his share — in this case, $2,200 a piece. Fortunately, the owners banded together and put enough pressure on the developer to make him repair the roof himself. If the developer had refused, each unit owner would have been legally required to cough up more than $2,000. If someone was unable to pay, he could be thrown out of his apartment and forced out of the project.

In one condominium project in the United States, the owners got so fed up with the problems they all packed up and walked out. What happens if a condominium project goes bankrupt? That's a question nobody seems to want to answer.

The whole area of condominium management is a shakey one. Usually, professional management is required for condominium projects, especially large ones. But the standards for managment firms can be very low or non-existent. As I explained, if you're not happy with the property management, you can't simply withhold your monthly maintenance fee. You will have to persuade a majority of the people in your project to do something about it such as changing the management.

What about your equity in the project? In cities like Vancouver and Toronto, the condominium market is depressed. In order to unload their condominiums, some developers are dropping their unit prices from, say, $55,000 to $47,000, to qualify potential buyers for government subsidy. What happens then to the unit value of those people who bought into the project at the higher price? In a short space of time, their condominium will have depreciated.

Many people think that when they buy a condominium, their home becomes their castle. Only afterwards are they surprised to discover that pets are not allowed or that they can't barbecue on their balcony or that their privacy may be invaded at any time by the management.

She's Proved Herself

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

NEW YORK — Being related to Jean Claude Boussac, the French fabric producer who also owns the House of Christian Dior, hasn't exactly hurt Brigitte Fleur's career as a fashion designer. But her stepfather didn't grease her path, either.

"He's been hard on me," she observed on her first trip to New York recently. "He made me prove myself."

Mrs. Fleur, whose husband is in the hotel business, was 32 years old and the mother of two sons, aged 5 and 7, before she had her first full-scale fashion show in Paris last fall. The success of that presentation, and its acceptance by Bergdorf-Goodman, along with other stores in the the U.S., led to her trip here with the collection for Pierre Clarence.

A small, bubbly woman whose straight blond hair has been fashionably crinkled, Mrs. Fleur has served a long apprenticeship.

She started designing fabrics for one of Boussac's enterprises. Eight years ago, she began making shirts, followed by raincoats. Since there was a need for bottoms to go with the tops, she was permitted to expand into skirts and pants a year ago. That led to her sportswear collection, with its emphasis on cheerful colors, ruffled edges and a generally flirtatious air.

A key group in sunny yellow and orange cotton, with a few flower-print pieces that combine both colors, includes a full, ruffle-edged skirt that looks as if it wraps to the front. Mrs. Fleur also provides a pair of narrow pants to be worn under it in the double-layered look so popular in Paris today. It happens to be a way of dressing she has adopted for herself; she was wearing stovepipe slim pants under a full skirt, with a complement of shirts and vests, on her visit here.

Toppings for the skirt-cum-pants range from a camisole for sunny days next summer or Caribbean visits this winter, to a ruffled-yoke shirt or a flowered jacket. The pieces can be mixed in yellow and orange, but either way the effect is glowing.

Similar ruffled skirts are done in plaids — bright colors, of course — and other pants have bloused legs that tie at the ankles.

Everything is gay and vibrant, which sets Mrs. Fleur's designs off even in the crowded field of French ready-to-wear.

For Liz Claiborne, who is one of New York's leading designers of moderate-priced sportswear, rust and plum are the major spring colors. The uniform she advocates is soft shirts, vests and full skirts, which is appropriate both for days in the office as well as playtime.

Miss Claiborne interprets the double-layer approach to fashion in scoop-neck loose tunics that are worn over full skirts in complementary prints. The tunics are about knee length, and the designer expects them to be worn separately, as dresses, when summer approaches.

The vests are often in plaids that combine the rust and plum tones and reverse to beige, which of course extends the looks of a wardrobe.

Velour sweatshirts in similar colors top crinkled cotton separates, and there are thin sweaters to be worn with them.

Skirts generally are getting longer, not shorter, Miss Claiborne observes, even in mass-volume stores such as Macy's.

Brigitte Fleur, right, and ruffled skirt

FOLK LOOK GOES

PARIS (Reuter) — Wearable and ultra-feminine styles have pushed aside the folklore and costume looks at the the spring and summer fashion presentations here.

Trousers of every description also are making a comeback in the collections presented by Pierre Cardin, Christian Dior and Jean Louis Scherrer.

But there is no hemline revolution. Dress lengths are anywhere from knee to low calf for daytime and ankle-length for evening.

Scherrer, the favorite dressmaker of Mrs. Valery Giscard d'Estaing, wife of the French president, uses courtier styles from the 18th century with shirts frothed with lace-trimmed jabots, hair tied back with huge bows, lace waistcoats, shirts with winged collars and narrow ties.

Let's Hear It For Speaking Up

DEAR ABBY: I notice that you commend restaurants that provide their blind customers with menus in braille. Will you please do a little favor for those of us who are hard of hearing or partially deaf:

Suggest that some enterprising novelty or gift manufacturer make up large, easy-to-read buttons that we can wear on our coats and dresses reading as follows: PLEASE SPEAK UP — I'M HARD OF HEARING. I for one would be glad to buy one and wear it.

I am so tired of having to ask people who mumble to please repeat what they have said. I'll bet those "Speak up" buttons would sell like hotcakes!

HARD OF HEARING

DEAR HARD: Oddly enough, many people who have a hearing disability are so self-conscious about it, they refuse to wear even the most inconspicuous hearing aid. But to your suggestion, I say, "Hear! Hear!" Such buttons would be a blessing for those who want them.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this in response to JUST PLAIN JEALOUS, who resents her husband's taking business trips with an attractive young female co-worker.

Dear Just Jealous: I am a professional woman. The fact that I am young and attractive should be in my favor, but it isn't. It's just the opposite. I'm tired of hearing those "what will my wife think" comments from men who refuse to travel with me, and the snide remarks made about men who do.

Believe me, I am not interested in seducing your husband. I'm just trying to do my job, and it's women like you who make it very difficult. Your insecurities are YOUR problem, please don't make them MINE.

It's not fair for attractive professional women to be held back by men with jealous wives, so next time you kick up a fuss because your husband has an out-of-town assignment with a woman, try walking a mile in my shoes. It's not easy. Sign me . . .

PROFESSIONAL GAL

DEAR PRO: You make a good point. Youth and beauty are not always advantages to a professional woman. They're sometimes handicaps.

DEAR ABBY: A friend telephoned and invited me and my husband to her home for a dinner party. I asked very politely, "Who else have you invited?"

She replied, "You'll find out when you get here."

Do you think my question was out of line? And how about her answer?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: You asked because you wanted to know. Nothing wrong with that. And she resented your question and refused to answer it. Nothing wrong with that either.

Common ¢ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Pine cones, unshelled nuts and interesting seeds carried home after hiking through a woodland intended for an autumn harvest arrangement may contain hidden bugs. Before you use them, bake the items in a warm oven, 150-175 degrees F., thereby killing tiny insects that will eat their way out of their hiding places. You could also put your collection in a plastic bag, add a few moth balls, twist the bag air-tight and wait for a few days for the fumes to take care of the insects.

Pregnancy No Problem

I have diabetes and I am pregnant. It was discovered accidentally during a regular medical examination. No one in my family has ever had diabetes. Is there anything that causes it? — Mrs. D. P., N.Y.

DEAR MRS. P.:

There are few diseases about which so much is known as diabetes. Yet the exact cause has eluded the most intensive scientific investigation.

It is not caused by a virus or a germ. It is due simply to the inability of the body to properly use the carbohydrates found in all normal diets.

Insulin is a hormone produced in the pancreas, a small organ in the body. In diabetes, the problem revolves around insulin, its function and malfunction.

From your point of view, the cause is not nearly as important as the message I want to convey to you.

When diabetes is recognized early and treated intensively by diet, by insulin if necessary, or by the new oral drugs, the life span of the patient can be unaffected by the disease.

It is not only longevity that can be unaffected, but the quality of life and productivity can remain unaltered.

Since diabetes tends to occur more frequently among women, pregnancy becomes a special problem. Before the success of modern treatment, the diabetic woman had trouble conceiving and, when conception did occur, the possibility of a normal pregnancy and normal childbirth was threatened.

Today, this has been completely reversed. With sensible treatment you should be able to carry your pregnancy to full term and give birth to a normal, healthy baby.

I believe that you will find extremely helpful a new edition of an excellent book by Dr. Henry Dolger and Bernard Seeman, How to Live with Diabetes. It is published by Norton. You and all other diabetics will gain not only insight into the disease but great hope because of the enormous advances that have been made toward its control.

Another very fine book has recently come to my attention. It is a Signet called Part Time Father written by Edith Atkin and Estele Rubin.

It is devoted entirely to the problem of the separated or divorced father and the complexity of his relationship with his children.

The plight of the father playing the role of the "occasional" parent is brought into sharp focus. The book contains excellent sugestions for creating a climate of security, love and devotion so essential to the health, happiness and good adjustment of the child. It clearly demonstrates how the upheaval that usually follows divorce can be modified. For the divorced parent, it is a needed book.

Although the 12-page pamphlet How to Conserve Energy and Protect Joints is specifically written for patients with rheumatoid arthritis, many people with other disorders can also benefit from it.

One important step to save your energy is to plan your time and the tasks you have to tackle. If you make a weekly timetable, first jot down the tasks you have to perform. As you fill in your timetable, eliminate any unnecessary job and try to alternate between heavy and light work, and between sitting and standing. Plan several rest periods throughout the day as these will minimize fatigue. According to the brochure, total rest, stretched out on a bed or sofa, is better than just relaxing in a chair. Also, whenever you can, work sitting down. You will use 25 per cent less energy if you sit rather than stand.

The brochure also recommends that you keep items you often need within easy reach, not to carry heavy loads, to buy easy-care clothes and to practice good posture.

In addition, you will learn how to protect your joints. For instance, walk only as far as you comfortably can. Strengthen the muscles around your joints by a planned exercise program and don't put on weight. If you feel pain during an activity, stop as soon as you can. If after any activity you have an unpleasant feeling for more than two hours, you probably overdid it.

Political Prisoners Fill Laotian Camps

BANGKOK (AP) — Harsh concentration camps and a network of labor farms holding tens of thousands of political prisoners have been set up in Laos since Communists took over the country two years ago, prisoners who have been released and Indochina analysts report.

Laotian communism, once dubbed "the revolution with the gentle face" for its seemingly soft-line approach, has spawned more political prisoners per capita of population than almost any other country, these sources say.

Prince Souphanouvong's regime admits to holding 40,000 persons in "re-education" camps around the country of 3.4 million people. Estimates by informed Western sources are of about 60,000 people, many with little hope of release, in about 50 camps.

Last month Laos in a goodwill gesture to its pro-Western neighbor Thailand released five Thais, mainly former U.S. government employees, who were held in camps in the remote northern Phong Saly province.

In interviews with The Associated Press, three of the group — the first known prisoners to be released and to provide witness accounts — described assaults, scant rations and clothing, and being threatened by guards that they would be forced to "confess" to being U.S. Central Intelligence Agency agents.

Yiam Theoyoo, a former electrician with the U.S. mission in Laos, estimated that 10-15 per cent of prisoners died from malaria, malnutrition and other ailements during his 15-month spell in a Phong Saly camp.

"We ate everything we found in the jungle — flowers, leaves, shoots," said Khong Khetsakhorn, 43, who spent 14 months in the a camp of 500-600 prisoners at Ban Na Pokh, about 560 kilometres north of the capital, Vientiane.

Khong, who worked on U.S. construction projects in Thailand and Laos, recalled the time a puppy belonging to an officer wandered into the camp.

"A Lao grabbed it and smashed its head so quickly it couldn't make a noise . . . we roasted and ate it."

Khong added that guards threatened to kill 10 prisoners in retaliation, but actually dropped the matter after holding two Laotian prisoners for several days in a black wooden punishment cage.

The three reported a strong Chinese presence in the area. They said Chinese medical personnel were at the camps, they saw Chinese soldiers, workers and equipment and Chinese aircraft often flew over the area.

The prisoners' accounts cannot be independently confirmed. But several Western analysts familiar with Laos said that, judging from other available information, the reports are believable.

In Cambodia, which also came under Communist rule in 1975, many thousands of persons were moved forcibly from the cities into rural areas and there have been numerous reports of mass killings. In Vietnam, prisoners were put into re-education camps and there were also reports of transfers to the country from cities.

The roundups began soon after the Dec. 2, 1975, downfall of King Savang Vatthana's U.S.-backed administration. Apart from persons suspected of U.S. government connections, prime targets were men of Vatthana's army and police and hill tribesmen who once formed a CIA-funded mercenary army.

The previous large U.S. mission in Laos now consists of about 12 diplomats and it is known to be edgy about its status.

London-based Amnesty International, which works on behalf of political prisoners, has twice approached the Laotian government about jailing civilians and urged it to produce the deposed king.

The 70-year-old former head of state was picked up last March on suspicion of taking part in an attempted anti-Communist rebellion and has not been seen since.

More Battles Rage in Beirut

BEIRUT (CP) — More fighting broke out in Beirut today involving two suburbs where some of the fiercest actions of the 1975-76 Lebanese civil war took place, residents of the area said.

They said today's fighting was between the Christian Ain Al-Rummaneh suburb and Moslem Shiyah. They had no other details.

The fighting reported from the suburbs followed a relatively quiet morning in Beirut following three days of clashes between Syrian peacekeeping forces and Christian members of the newly rebuilt Lebanese army. Officials said 150 persons were killed and 250 wounded in that fighting.

Much fighting in this week's flare-up has been in Ashrafiyeh, in the heart of Christian east Beirut, where lines formed at bakeries today as bread began to run short.

Grocers reported brisk business as the war-weary populace stocked up on essentials — a move which suggested little confidence in expressions of optimism by Prime Minister Selim Al-Hoss on the return of a high-ranking Lebanese delegation from Damascus late Thursday.

Local newspapers quoted him as saying that the talks "encouraged us to expect positive results shortly."

Namibia's Future Discussed

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — The major Western powers today prepared a concerted attempt to resolve the long-standing Namibia (South-West Africa) independence dispute.

U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance will join the foreign ministers of Britain, France, West Germany and Canada for talks Saturday with Pik Botha, foreign minister of South Africa, which governs the mineral-rich territory.

In preparation for these negotiations, the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations and a bitter critic of South African policy, Andrew Young, invited Botha to lunch today.

Also invited were representatives of the five Western countries which almost a year ago began the search for an internationally acceptable solution to the Namibia problem.

Young had the five envoys to dinner Thursday with Sam Nujoa, president of the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO).

The ambassadors were to consult formally with Nujoma today. Their superiors — Vance, David Owen of Britain, Louis de Guiringaud of France, Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany and Don Jamieson of Canada — are to meet with him Saturday.

The UN recognizes SWAPO as the authentic representative of the Namibian people. But South Africa has refused to deal directly with the guerrilla group.

Rhodesia to Call Up Blacks for Army Duty

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesia announced today that it is drafting young blacks into the white-led armed forces in the war against nationalist guerrillas fighting for black-majority rule.

Manpower Minister Rowan Cronje said in a statement that all blacks who began trade apprenticeships as of Nov. 1 last year will have 30 days to register for the draft.

About 220 youths aged 16 and older will be affected, said the statement published in today's government gazette, adding that actual conscription will be deferred until next January.

No official comment was immediately forthcoming from black nationalist organizations. Spokesmen said they need time to study the new regulation.

It is the first time significant numbers of blacks have been subjected to call-up in the war against the black guerrillas, with whom many of them sympathize.

Some black doctors were notified last October that they would be drafted in non-combat roles.

Until then, no Africans had ever been forced to serve in the five-year bush war, although several thousand black volunteers form an estimated 80 per cent of security forces.

Only whites, Asians and people of mixed racial background had hitherto been liable for conscription. All are classified as Europeans under the Rhodesian constitution and enjoy similar voting rights.

Stunted Kids Grew With Baking Soda

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers said Thursday that baking soda has helped some stunted children grow as much as five inches a year.

Two pediatric professors from the University of California at San Francisco said children who suffered from an extemely rare kidney disorder—renal tubular acidiosis (RTA) — grew quickly after receiving doses of sodium bicarbonate.

The professors, Elisabeth McSherry and R. Curtis Morris, published their findings in this month's issue of the Journal of Clinical Investigation. The report culminated a 13-year study of 10 children suffering from RTA.

The kidneys of those affected by RTA do not flush normal amounts of acids from the blood stream and to the urine. The excess acid stunts growth for an unknown reason, the researchers said.

The researchers said baking soda neutralizes the excess acid in the kidneys and promotes normal growth rates. In infants, they said, baking soda was mixed with liquid food, and in older children, it was administered in pill form.

Among those treated with baking soda, impaired growth was restored in eight children and was prevented in two infants, Ms. McSherry said.

The researchers said Mark Spoon of suburban Santa Rosa grew at a "supernormal velocity" after receiving baking soda treatments.

At five years old, Mark was as tall as a normal two-year-old and had developed several kidney stones. But during the next three years, while receiving the treatments, his growth rate increased two to three times beyond his earlier rate, the researchers said.

Now 13, Mark stands five-feet-four-inches and "will grow several more inches during the next few years," Ms. McSherry said.

Mark and the other children grew an average of five inches a year, compared with an average child's annual growth of 2½ inches, the report said.

The researchers warned of potential health hazards from large amounts of baking soda and said the treatment should not become a home remedy.

Goalie Has Team in Tizzy

CHICAGO (AP) — Michele Emerson may get iced again.

The nine-year-old goalie for the Waukegan Shields amateur hockey team was ordered off the ice when her otherwise all-male team-mates played in Canada last month. The Shields are scheduled to play against a visiting Canadian club in Kenosha, Wis., tonight.

But if Michele shows up, "we've told our team to just skate off the ice and wait for the next game," says Pat Doherty of the Kitchener, Ont. Hockey Association.

Teams in the Canadian association face suspension if they play against girls. The issue is in the Canadian courts. American amateur hockey rules permit girls and boys on the same team.

Maine Indians Offered $25M

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — The Penobscot and Passamaquoddie Indians wanted 12 million ancestral acres and damages together worth $25 billion. What they have been offered is $25 million in cash and fishing rights on 300,000 acres.

The proposed settlement of the Indian land claim was outlined Thursday by a special presidential committee. Reviews were mixed.

Passamaquoddy leaders approved it the same day. The Penobscot tribe was expected to announced its decision today.

Maine leaders were cool. The landholders who would have to surrender the acres were silent.

The proposal would give the tribes the $25 million in cash to settle all land claims except those against 14 paper companies and other private owners over 50,000 acres.

The U.S. interior department would buy 300,000 acres of private timberland at $5 an acre and hold it in trust for the tribes, which would have hunting and fishing rights. It was not spelled out what rights paper companies would retain. The proposal also calls for continued state payment of $1.7 million a year for 15 years to the tribes.

The tribes would have the option to buy 200,000 acres of land at prevailing prices, which the committee placed at $112 an acre for timberland. The federal government would spend $3.5 million to help the tribes purchase the land.

Both the state of Maine and Congress must approve the plan.

The landholders, whose ranks include Scott Paper Co., Georgia Pacific and Great Northern, had no immediate reaction to the announced proposal. They were to be briefed today in Washington by federal officials.

The tribes claim 60 per cent of Maine's territory, about 12 million acres, saying they were stripped from them in violation of a 1790 federal law which barred states from making land deals with Indians unless Congress approved.

Announcement of the proposal came just a week before President Jimmy Carter's scheduled trip to Maine to campaign for U.S. Senator William Hathaway, who said Thursday chances were "pretty good" that Congress would approve the plan. Hathaway did not indicate how he would vote.

Maine Attorney-General Joseph Brennan, a candidate for governor, denounced the proposal as "irresponsible and indefensible."

While legislative leaders declined official comment Thursday, there were angry grumblings in the halls about "giving away the state."

The Bridge Expert

More often than not, the practice of deceptive play produces winning results when it is applied by declarer, since a defender, by a deceptive play, might easily mislead partner as to the true state of affairs. Nevertheless, many situations arise where a defender deliberately (and correctly) runs the risk of misleading partner to gain a desired result. The latter point is the theme of today's deal.

Both sides vulnerable.

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

West's opening spade lead was taken by East's king, after which East cashed the spade ace. To trick three East led the diamond eight! When West followed with the six, dummy's nine captured the trick.

There was no doubt in declarer's mind that East's diamond eight was a singleton. Why else (declarer asked himself) would East be leading a diamond into the jaws of dummy's A-K-J-9?

So, at trick four, declarer led a trump off dummy and took the trick with his ace. To trick five he cashed the trump king, and West discarded a spade. Declarer then conceded two tricks to East's jack and queen of trumps. And so he went down one, having been victimized by East's diamond lead at trick three.

Suppose that East had made the normal play of a spade at trick three. Declarer would have won the trick with his queen, after which he would have cashed the ace of trumps. Then he would have entered dummy via a club or a diamond to lead dummy's remaining trump. When East would play low, South would insert his nine, to guard against East's possession of the Q-J-x-x. With the nine winning, it would become a routine matter to cash the trump king, felling East's jack. East's queen of trumps would now be the defenders' only winner.

But when East returned a diamond at trick three, declarer felt that he couldn't afford to make a "safety play" in the trump suit. If he did, and West happened to have been dealt either the queen or jack, West would return a diamond for East to ruff.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, February 11
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get going, take initiative, display pioneering spirit. Individual with financial authority is interested, will back you — give a positive signal. Cancer person is likely to play key role along with one born under Capricorn. In matters of speculation, stick to number 3.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could feel restricted, locked in format, previous plans, procedures. Key is to take a fling, display willingness to dare. Authorized persons, institutions will not be shocked. On the contrary, you will be encouraged. You get support from surprising sources.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on what to do to make wishes come true. Romance, creativity are in picture. Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently — so does the number 5. Yes, change is due — and necessary. Read, write, display, communicate and distribute.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on achievement, accomplishment, establishing yourself at "head of the line." Home environment is important — those in position to "pull strings" want to know about your stability — or lack of it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Steer clear of individuals who cannot see forest for the trees. Get out of milieu which is limited in faith and vision. You have chance now to publish, communicate, to overcome language and other barriers. Do so!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get beneath surface indications — you could strike paydirt. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently. Nothing is halfway — now it is all or nothing, hot or cold. Stick to number 8. Realize involvement is serious — if you don't believe it, just wait and see!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22); Finish, complete one phase of activity, study prospects for a fresh legal deal. Aries is in picture and so is another Libran. What seemed a certainty requires additional review. Know it and do your homework. Partner or mate needs special attention. Give it — if you know what's good for you!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on what counts as contrasted to fluff, wishful thinking, theory based on ivory tower thinking. Make new starts in new directions. Stress independence of thought, action. Leo, Aquarius could participate in your personal scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good Moon aspect indicates physical attraction, feeling, emotional responses. Teach and learn, utilize intuitive intellect. One who aided in past is available. Don't permit false pride to block progress. Cancer, Leo and Aquarius figure prominently — so does the number 11.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Check various possibilities connected with building, enlarging horizons, entertaining at home base. Gemini, Sagittarius figure in picture. One who usually is reliable seems to be confused. Maintain your own balance while establishing base on solid structure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain valid hint from Capricorn message. Your popularity increases — those who had been adversaries will become staunch allies. Know it and be confident, happy, secure. Relative in transit makes views, motives crystal-clear.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get more for what you do, give than in recent past. Sagittarius, Gemini and Virgo play featured roles. Written material could result in cash gain. Your cycle is moving higher — you are going to win. Collect data and analyze it.

IF FEBRUARY 11 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are a natural teacher — you are intuitive, sensitive, emotional and could have digestive problems. Aquarius persons play key roles in your life — and so do Cancer, Leo and Capricorn. You are progressive, a humanitarian, an idealist, a visionary. Two years ago you got rid of burden, emotionally and financially. Now you begin to reap benefits of new start made last year. Your most significant month of 1978 will be June.

Hustling in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Times Square is one of those places you have to see to believe.

They line up like fence pickets along 8th Avenue, better known these days as the Minnesota Strip.

"Going out tonight?"

The teen-age sex business is a large part of the Times Square area sex trade the city estimates grosses $1.5 billion a year.

There are a half dozen major callboy operations plus dozens of smaller ones dealing in boys in their teens.

Most are runaways unable to make any other living. Each night a few more find their way to Under 21 on 44th street — the heart of the strip.

There, Rev. Bruce Ritter wages a lonely war which he admits is not going well.

At Under 21 boys and girls can get a shower, medical aid, clean clothes, a meal, a place to sleep and a chance to go home if they want to. Most don't want to.

"How could a kid go home again to, say, a small town in upstate New York, after working on the strip for two or three years?" asked the 50-year-old Franciscan priest. "Maybe 12 to 15 per cent go home again. Often their parents don't want them back."

In the nine months Under 21 has been open, more than 3,000 kids have come for help. Ritter says 60 to 70 per cent have been involved in prostitution or pornography in a city that police say has 20,000 runaways 15 or under.

"We're seeing up to 70 or 80 kids a day now," said Ritter. "We're overcrowded, but I refuse to turn anybody away."

It costs about $800,000 a year to operate Under 21, and Ritter has to raise about $500,000 of that, mostly through donations. Most of the rest comes from state funds.

All kinds come to Under 21. Most are 15-18, more than half are boys. Most are from poor, one-parent homes, and have no job training. Illiteracy is common.

"There are simply no services for these kids," Ritter said. "The juvenile courts lose them when they turn 16, but until they're 18 they can't get medical services most of the time, they can't get an apartment or welfare help."

Visitors at Under 21 have included a pimp offering $500 for a young girl who took refuge there, a 14-year-old boy being chased by his pimp with a broken bottle, and a 16-year-old boy with a contract out on him.

While some of the kids return home and others find jobs, return to school or are placed in programs, Ritter knows most won't come in at all. Of those who do, many will return to the street.

"I can't tell you how many times I've heard a kid say, 'Bruce, I'm not going to make it; I'm going to die out there; the street is going to kill me.'

"We have one kid who comes in here now. A beautiful kid. A bright, articulate kid. If he were yours, you'd think of him in terms of a doctor. He's a hustler. He has jumped into a thousand cars, slept in a thousand beds. He's 17, and he gets drunk every day. That's how he forgets what he does. He's black, he can't read or write, and he has no job skills.

"And he knows he's going to die out there. He knows it just as sure as we're sitting here."

Britain's Racial Troubles Worst Since the '58 Riots

LONDON (Reuter) — Immigrant Shomox Ali could no longer stand it when his daughter was kicked as she tried to buy icecream. He moved his family from the high-rise where they were the only non-whites.

In Wolverhampton, in central England, about 150 West Indian youths marched on a tavern to seek revenge against a white gang. In the ensuing clash five policemen were injured.

Police maintain these are merely isolated incidents but the record shows that Britain has just passed through its worst year for race relations since the notorious 1958 riots in London's Notting Hill district.

Racial tensions undoubtedly have increased in this country where 1.9 million West Indians and Asians live with 54 million whites.

Now Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher has made immigration a political campaign issue claiming that the colored community of Britain will more than double by the year 2000.

David Lane, chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality, says fears of colored people are increasing.

Complaints persist that blacks are taking houses and jobs, although in Brixton, a south London ghetto, more than one-half the West Indian youths are unemployed. Those that do have jobs are frequently messenger boys or kitchen helpers.

Commenting on a reported outbreak of school playground violence in London, Asian spokesman Praful Patel said: "Racial violence, intimidation and harassment is spreading and no longer stops at the school gates."

Such fears are difficult to assess for middle-class whites and those living outside the cities who may never see a black.

Five deaths were attributed to racial violence last year, small compared to violence in the United States or South Africa.

Nevertheless there is a mood of sharpening uncertainty as the Asian community grows — 54,000 new immigrants arrived in 1977.

Twenty-five years after the first West Indians came, enticed by jobs in hospitals and transport, there are still few signs of real integration of the three communities, white, Asian and West Indian.

A recent poll found that 59 per cent of Britons believed immigrants are a serious social problem and 49 per cent believe they should be offered money to return home.

This is the course long advocated by Enoch Powell, a right-wing politician who claims the rivers of Britain will flow with blood unless the immigration tide is reversed.

The neo-Nazi National Front party says colored persons should be forcibly repatriated. The National Front so far has no representation in the House of Commons.

Many immigrants believe Britain is a racist country.

"We all know that the black British are second-class citizens," says Louis Chase, a West Indian.

"It was never our primordial wish to come here but crude economic circumstances necessitated it. We are here — and we are going nowhere."

In London's working-class East End, where 8,000 Asians live, attacks on colored persons are more numerous than on whites, statistics show. There have been attempts to form black self-defence groups.

Vitamins Help The Brain

HALIFAX (CP) — Dr. Allan Cott, a New York psychiatrist, says most doctors cannot accept that vitamins can alter brain chemistry and be effective in treating a wide range of mental illness.

Cott described megavitamin therapy, developed by three Canadian doctors in 1953, as a form of preventive medicine. The treatment involves administering massive doses of ordinary vitamins, such as B3, B6 and C, to people suffering severe forms of depression.

The treatment's effect is to "restore a proper balance in the brain's chemistry," said Cott.

Cott said he believes megavitamin treatment is more beneficial than administering chemical drugs because there are no harmful side effects.

Patients receiving drugs for treatment of severe mental illness over a long period often incur side-effects ranging from chronic dryness of the nose and mouth to loss of muscular control, he said.

Cott said in many cases these drugs can either be replaced or used in conjunction with megavitamin therapy. The therapy could be used to help chronically depressed people who nevertheless manage to carry on with day-to-day life.

HORNER SELLS SOLES

But they fetched $200 in Edmonton Wednesday night, on the strength of one man's name—Jack Horner.

Liberal party officials swore they were the very shoes the maverick Alberta MP wore when he crossed the floor of the House of Commons.

Church Attacks Child Porn Ban

OTTAWA (CP) — Smut peddlers would rejoice if the government enacts proposed legislation to clamp down on child pornography without also bringing in tough new laws against other forms of obscenity, a spokesman for the churches said Thursday.

Rev. Brad Massman, co-chairman of a committee on pornography and obscenity that embraces major Christian and Moslem churches, told the Commons justice committee that any new law against child sex exploiters would give a green light to purveyors of such things as sodomy, bestiality, sado-masochistic sex, torture and necrophilia.

"To do nothing in light of the current situation would be inexcusable," Father Massman said as the committee continued hearings on 10 anti-pornography bills sponsored by individual MPs.

"And just to take the easy way out with an amendment on child pornography would be almost as bad."

Massman's comments represented an attack on a position taken by Justice Minister Ron Basford earlier this week. As the committee hearings opened, Basford pledged to bring in new Criminal Code prohibitions against child pornography, but he said he would depend on stricter enforcement of current laws against obscenity to deal with other forms of fifth.

Conservative MPs have described the stand as a cop-out. Father Massman said it "would be inexcusable."

Courts currently have great difficulty dealing with obscenity cases because the Criminal Code is ambiguous, defining the crime in terms of undue exploitation of sex and contemporary community standards.

Father Massman said the churches have received an overwhelming response to their campaign against pornography—"people come up to you by the hundreds and say thank you for what you've done"—and that it is important for legislators to move immediately to tighten restrictions against so-called hard-core pornography.

While the church committee he represented disagreed with the production and distribution of soft-core and other forms of pornography as well, its campaign was based on curtailment of the hard-core trade.

He described hard-core as sex with animals and other material showing explicit sex acts. Soft-core referred to simulated sex acts with participants partially dressed.

Father Massman compared the spread of pornography to a habit of early Roman gluttons, who "tickled their throats with feathers after gorging themselves on food in order to throw up and start over."

"This throw-up philosophy seems to be essential to the commercial success of pornography."

The main purpose of the smut trade, he said, appeared to be making money by "reaching for those who are physically, psychologically or emotionally lonely and troubled."

Father Massman dismissed suggestions that a clamp-down on pornography represents a threat to freedom of the press or expression.

"The sale of heroin, the encouragement of alcoholics, planting the seeds of sadism and hedonism, the forging of prescriptions and driver's licences and the distribution of socially-offensive appeals to sexual licence have nothing to do with constitutional freedoms."

He said current laws against obscenity cannot be enforced, and he called on the government to make a beginning against hard-core pornography.

Roger Young, parliamentary secretary to Basford, said the government is interested in just such a start. It planned to introduce laws against child pornography as a beginning. And it had an open mind on suggestions for other Criminal Code changes.

The government first had to get some kind of formal idea from provincial attorneys-general about how far it should go.

Pricking Out Young Plants

The separation of tiny seedlings and setting them out to grow into strong young plants is quite an ordeal for new gardeners. The job is known as "pricking out" by experienced workers. In February and March it is an indoor task — either in a sunporch or slightly heated greenhouse.

One visual demonstration is worth more than all my words, but the words may serve as a guide when the time comes.

Tackle the job as soon as you see the first pair of true leaves emerging between the seed leaves. The roots will then be advanced enough to take new hold, but not so long as to be badly damaged. There will be little or no wilting at this stage, another advantage. And also the less time spent in the crowded seed box, the more sturdy will be their growth; bushy instead of leggy.

Use a shallow box about 10 by 20 inches or similar. It should be no deeper than three inches and have one-eight-inch spaces between the two pieces of bottom board. Over the bottom put a single sheet of old newspaper to retain the soil mixture.

Mix screened soil from an old compost heap with a handful of screened dampened peatmoss and the same amount of sand to each transplanting box, or flat as it is called.

Fill the flat; level with a piece of wood drawn across the surface, then settle the soil by taping the flatsharply on bench or table. There should now be about a half-inch space between soil level and the top edge of flat for watering without losing soil. Have the mixture pre-dampened just enough that a hole made with a pencil sized dibber remains open to receive the roots.

A general rule is to lift only a half dozen seedlings at one time, separate gently by holding the leaves (not stems) and place one into each hole.

Holes are two inches apart, and deep enough to take the length of root. As each seedling is held in the hole, press the soil against it gently with the dibber to firm the soil for contact. That's all, no fussing.

Snapdragons, patunias lettuce, onions, cauliflower are all set out into flats indoors at this time, singly as described above; and then kept in a light, airy, but slightly warm place until later planting into the open garden.

At least two kinds of plants are handled a bit differently. Lobelias of the annual types, are taken from the seedbox in group of three to five seedings for translanting.

For one thing, seedlings are tiny, another the resulting plant makes a nice rounded group more quickly; thirdly you'll find the slender white stems of lobelia root freely wherever they contact the soil.

Another commonly grown plant to translant two or three together is the annual white alyssum.

Later when pricking out tomato seedlings, each one can be set a trifle lower than in the seedbox, for it will make a few more roots on the buried part of the stem. But don't try this method on seedlings in general.

For the first few days after moving the seedlings have the soil barely damp. The root action is more rapid than if the soil is soaked with water. Water cools at night; and it excludes air between the soil particles — both undesirable conditions in the early life of seedlings.

Within days, new growth will be seen, and the little plants quickly develop a fine sturdiness to delight your gardening heart.

One thing about the old time estate auctioneer. He had enthusiasm. You got swept away with the enthuisasm, the excitment and thrill of the sale. And why not? Buying property is exciting. Especially when it's a deal. Like this 5 acres of country with 230' of waterfront. You coudn't buy two city lots ffor this price. Just $65,000. Feel that old enthusiasm starting to build? Let's get together.

VACATION IN PARADISE

It's cheaper than you think. A few weeks in Hawaii costs most visitors thousands of dollars every winter. But it needn't. You can buy land for almost as little as it costs to rent family accommodation for a few weeks, as little as $1200 an acre. And it's an investment, not money gone forever. To find out more you don't have to go all the way to Hawaii. Just call: JAY HINTON right here in Victoria 592-2431 or 652-1364 Lansdowne Properties.

309 IN MEMORIAM

GAY — Lois Marilyn (Logan). In loving memory of our daughter whose suffering ended February 10th, 1969.

She gave us years of happiness
With her gentle loving ways,
She left us happy memories

—Mother and Dad, Grace and Robert Logan; —Sisters, Gwen and Heather and families.

McLEAN — In loving memory of our son and brother Gregory William (Bill) who died accidentally Feb. 10, 1977.

"If God could give us just one wish,
We know what we would do,
We'd give everything we have
For yesterday, and you."

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Saanich Clean-Up Lauded

Saanich officials were publicly complimented this week on their progress in ridding many private properties in the municipality of old car bodies, accumulated junk and other eyesores.

A report to council by property manager William Weir said that clean-up enforcement has concentrated on the problem areas of Interurban and Wilkinson roads where 46 properties were inspected.

Of these 33 have been resolved, nine require further inspections to check whether the owners have complied with orders and legal action has been started against four property owners.

Weir said more than 200 other properties throughout Saanich were inspected during January.

B.C. Rail's Freight Up

Carloadings on the B.C. Railway totalled 14,358 in January, six more than in January of 1977, the Crown-owned railway said in a release Thursday.

The railway said there was a greater volume in plywood, logs, posts, pilings, export wood pulp and piggyback carloads.

There was a decrease in export grain, copper ores and concentrates, veneer, lumber, wood chips and domestic wood pulp.

Stately Home 'A Prison'

LONDON (Reuter) — A stately home with golf course and game park would seem to be an ideal inheritance, but not to the Marchioness of Tavistock.

The former society beauty complained today about her father-in-law, the Duke of Bedford, saying he and his wife had been "very selfish" to pack up and move to Paris three years ago, leaving the 16,000-acre estate to her husband, Robin, the Marquis of Tavistock.

"My husband never wanted to live there . . . to be made a prisoner of inheritance is very cruel," said Lady Tavistock, daughter of millionaire banker Henry Tiarks.

The estate is an enormous strain, she said. It is so big "it can take an hour and a half to find us."

Lady Tavistock said all doors and windows at the estate, Woburn Abbey near London, have to be kept locked for security.

"I have a ring with about 100 keys, and I have to take them with me to get in or out. I'm my own jailer. I cannot just say, 'To hell with it,' and leave, so I hold the fort during the week."

Lady Tavistock spoke wistfully of life before taking over the stately home when she could cook, garden and be with her three sons.

"Now it's like living in a museum," she said.

West Warns Ethiopia

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Cyrus Vance warned Soviet-supported Ethiopia today that if it invades Somalia, the United States might reconsider its ban on arms to Somalia.

But Vance told a news conference that Moscow has given assurances that Ethiopia will not push that far in its war over the Ogaden, the desert region along Ethiopia's eastern border with Somalia.

"If and when that (an invasion) occurs we will prepared to deal with that," he said .

Four other Western countries — Britain, France, West Germany and Italy — have agreed with the U.S. that if Ethiopia invades Somalia they will consider arming the Somalis, diplomatic sources in London said today.

The sources said the five nations told the Soviet Union that an Ethiopian thrust into Somalia could turn the Horn of Africa into an arena of East-West tension.

The five Western countries have been skeptical of Somalia's claims its soldiers did not invade Ethiopia's eastern Ogaden region to fight with secessionist ethnic Somali insurgents.

So far they have refused to sell arms to Somalia, which has been without a weapons supplier since cutting ties with the Soviet Union last summer.

At the same time, Vance said Cuba's military support for Ethiopia — he estimated about 2,000 Cubans are actively involved in the fighting — is slowing the prospect of renewed diplomatic relations between Havana and Washington.

He also told the Soviet Union that negotiations to demilitarize the Indian Ocean are "inconsistent" with Soviet meddling in the Horn of Africa.

On another subject, Vance said everyone of the 90 or so Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories "should not exist" under international law and it is up to Israel to negotiate their dismantling with Egypt.

Vance reiterated U.S. support for a Palestinian "homeland" linked to Jordan and went out of his way to pay tribute to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for promising to persevere in peace talks with Israel.

Mideast Summit Proposed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli newspapers say President Carter plans to invite Prime Minister Menachem Begin to Washington this spring and wants President Anwar Sadat to meet them.

The Jerusalem Post said its report of the proposed three-man summit came from American Jewish leaders who dined with Carter at the White House on Wednesday.

Another newspaper, Yediot Aharonot, said diplomatic circles in Washington told its correspondent that Carter wanted Begin and Sadat to meet with him in April.

Begin has tentatively scheduled a trip to the U.S. in April, but so far it is billed as a private visit to participate in American celebrations of Israel's 30th anniversary.

Income Beats Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The income of the typical United States household eased ahead of the inflation rate between 1975 and 1976 as it increased by $205 to $12,686, the government reported Thursday.

In a report on household income in 1976, the Census Bureau also said that after adjusting for the six per cent increase in prices during the year, the median income of U.S. households increased two per cent, from $11,800 in 1975.

"However, the 1976 median household income of $12,690 was still lower, in terms of 1976 constant dollars, than the peak of $13,470 in 1973," the report said.

The survey, which was taken in March, 1977, shows that of the country's 74.1 million households, 10.8 million or 14.6 per cent had income of $25,000 or more in 1976.

Ousted Red Spy Ring Just Tip of Iceberg?

Times News Services

TORONTO — RCMP security forces are close to uncovering several other Soviet spies believed connected to a major spy ring of between 40 and 50 agents operating out of a trade mission in Metropolitan Toronto.

The Soviet spy ring uncovered by the RCMP represents only a portion of Soviet agents operating in Canada, according to police sources quoted by the Globe and Mail. sources as saying that the

The newspaper quotes its informants as saying there are hundreds of agents in Canada who are paid to provide information to Soviet agents.

The Soviet Union, meanwhile, officially denied today that its 11 diplomats expelled from Canada had been guilty of any "impermissible activities" and accused Canadian authorities of plotting to damage Soviet-Canadian relations.

The Soviet denial came in an official statement by the news agency Tass, which carries the weight of a government announcement.

Tass accused opponents of detente in Canada of stepping up in recent times an anti-Soviet "campaign," backed by Canada's "special services," presumably intelligence agencies.

Officials of the Soviet embassy in Ottawa say the expulsions will divert attention from what they say are Canada's internal problems and make life easier for the RCMP.

"Canada and America can't live without us," said press officer Victor Mikheev. "When they can't put in order their own internal affairs they have to have an outlet."

Another press officer, Igor Lobanov, said the charges of spying "are laughable accusations."

Asked why Canada would risk harming relations between the two countries if the charges were not true, he replied "it will make easier the life of the RCMP now. They will get good press coverage from now on."

Prime Minister Trudeau, however, said today that the incident will not stop Canada from cultivating good relations with the Soviet Union.

"No doubt it will be made more difficult by the discovery of the spy ring but I don't see it as the end of our relations in any sense," the prime minister said at a news conference.

"Naturally the discovery of the spy ring is a disturbing thing to friendship," the prime minister said.

He regretted this but it should not stop the two countries from seeking good relations in the cultural and economic fields.

Trudeau said the Soviet-Canadian friendship protocol was not prepared with the thought that there would be incidents like the nuclear-powered Soviet satellite crash and the spy case.

In the Commons, Conservative MPs pressed the government to beef up RCMP security forces and restrict travel permits for Soviet diplomats in the wake of the Soviet spy revelations.

But Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais was noncommital about the proposal for increases in RCMP security forces. And External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said it would not be appropriate to end travel permits.

Otto Jelinek (PC—High Park-Humber Valley) urged Jamieson to restrict travel permits to Soviet officials until the government has assurances that Soviet spy activities have ceased in this country.

Jamieson replied that it is unreasonable to expect to give him the assurances that Jelinek suggests. He also noted that Canada seeks travel permits for its diplomats in other countries, hinting that denial of permits might rebound against Canada.

Some Pretty Sneaky Tricks

OTTAWA (UPI) — James Bond had nothing on the Soviets.

In fact, even the producer of a grade-B movie would be hard-pressed to top some of the gimmicks the Soviets came up with for their Canadian spy network.

Among the cloak-and-dagger methods used by the Soviets were Coca-Cola can letter boxes, hollow sticks and a modified Marlboro cigarette package to pass messages and film, orange peels to signal delivery and colored tape stuck to a pillar at a local shopping centre to arrange meetings.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police agent who broke the ring by pretending to pass on classified information also received ridiculously detailed hand-drawn maps showing him rendezvous points.

RCMP copies of handwritten Soviet documents show that one complex set of signals used colored tapes stuck to the first pillar of the arcade in a suburban Ottawa shopping centre.

"Yellow Color — call for the regular meeting.

"Black Color — call for the instant meeting.

"Red Color — call to stop any operations."

Another document called for a meeting at Old Chelsea in the Gatineau Park 15 miles from Ottawa. The RCMP double agent was to park his car and wait for a contact to say: "Can you show me the way to Pink Lake?" He was to answer: "Sorry, I know Pink Lake, but in Ontario Province."

A document outlining how to use a drop code called DLB No. 2 describes a woody country road and a bridge. "Put the container beside the last abutment of the bridge on your right side (see the scheme IV). Use a Coca-Cola tin as a container.

"Signals: to let us know that you 'put the container in,' place an orange peel beside the sign, 'Notch Road' . . . put a peel so that it could be seen from a driving car."

TWO DEAD IN L.A.

Flash Flood, Tornado, Rains Lash S. California

Times News Services

LOS ANGELES — A furious wind and rain storm, including a tornado, lashed rain-soaked Southern California Thursday night and early today, unleashing flash floods that swept away autos, burst at least one small dam and caused widespread damage and some deaths.

Police activated the emergency command post in the city hall basement for the first time since it was set up several years ago and a fire department spokesman called the situation "very grave."

Police said there were at least two known deaths in the city proper, including a man drowned by a wall of water that struck his car in West Los Angeles.

Elsewhere a teen-ager was swept to his death in a flood-swollen stream.

Thousands of homes and businesses were in darkness for up to several hours after rain and wind combined to knock out power from Santa Barbara to San Diego.

The Los Angeles police department called a tactical alert during the night, requiring all personnel to remain on duty to handle dozens of emergency calls about mudslides, downed live wires, power outages and flash floods.

"Someone in our apartment building took the elevator down to the basement and brought 150 gallons of water back up into the lobby," said George Baron, 38, of West Hollywood. "The water just gushed in when the doors opened. Seven units in our building are ruined, the water came down the alley and gushed in through the door jams."

A tornado lashed El Segundo. Police reported flash floods in mountain and canyon areas and water coursing six feet deep throgh the streets of Hollywood. A dam collapsed in Big Tujunga canyon, pouring a wall of water down into the residential area below.

A city fire department spokesman said "the extent of damage is not yet known, but we're trying to evacuate the area — there so many things happening throughout the city, but that's the worst problem we have now."

"The streets are impassable. There are cars piles up in heaps of three or four, mixed in with mud about 18 inches deep and boulders," said reporter Jeff Wilson, who lives in the canyon.

"The power is out all over, and in the dark and confusion it's hard to tell what's going on, but one of my neighbors said another van just floated past."

Police in Montebello said they were using boats to reach stranded motorists

QUEBEC TAKES CHALLENGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec rugby team has accepted a challenge issued Wednesday at a hearing of the Task Force on Canadian Unity.

"Anytime — we're all for it", Dave Hardy, secretary of the Ormstown Saracens, said Thursday in a telephone interview.

Second row forward Gordon Stewart of Surrey Beavers Rugby Club suggested Wednesday a rugby game be played between "any Quebec rugby club and our club as a solution to the Canadian dilemma of duality."

Let there be two 40-minute halves played under Canadian Rugby Union rules, he said, with a bilingual impartial referee. Afterwards, both teams would head for the closest watering hole where the second battle would take place — a beer-drinking contest.

Tel Wind-Up Confusion

The B.C. Telephone contract dispute appears to be grinding toward a weekend settlement but in the meantime both sides are locked in a confusing battle over return-to-work conditions.

The latest skirmish, bringing union charges that the company is deliberately blocking the workers' return, stems from a B.C. Tel demand that employees sign a four-point interim agreement if they want to go back to work immediately.

Company spokesman Keith Mathews said today the agreement will only have to be signed by the returning employees until the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union has ratified a tentative three-year contract.

The ratification process began Wednesday night and is expected to be completed by Sunday.

The union says the company is going to make the employees sign the interim four-point agreement until the collective agreement is approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board, a process that could take up to two months.

"Nobody is going to sign that thing," TWU spokesman Chris Anderson said today.

The union has been given legal advice to the effect that individual employees are not allowed, under the terms of the Canada Labor Code, to sign individual contracts with the company, he said.

He said the interim agreement is just another vindictive move by the company to "try to teach our people a lesson for going out in the first place."

The interim agreement states that if an employee

Prices Rise In the U.S.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. government reported today an increase in wholesale prices, indicating that the rate of inflation in the United States is likely to accelerate in the next few months.

The labor department said wholesale prices of finished goods rose by 0.6 per cent in January, following a 0.5-percent gain in December. The over-all wholesale price index jumped by 0.9 per cent.

NEWS BRIEFS

Mayor's Pay Up

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — City council has voted to increase Mayor Tom Barnett's salary by 46 per cent. Alderman said they voted for the increase—to $12,500 a year—because they felt Barnett was underpaid.

Oranges Decline

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Citrus picking in Israel has dropped by 30 per cent since poisoned oranges were discovered in Western Europe, the Israel Citrus Marketing Board said today.

Hostages Held

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — Two or three armed men were holding several customers hostage after an abortive attempt to rob a bank here today, municipal police reported.

Major Recall

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (Reuter) — American Motors Corp. recalled today more than half of the almost 300,000 cars it sold in the 1976 model year because of a possible defective part in the exhaust emission system.

Ten Years

CALGARY (CP) — A 25-year-old heroin addict who imported an estimated $268,000 worth of the drug into Canada from Thailand was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in jail.

Jobless No Disaster Grit Report Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs are hopping mad over a document prepared by the employment and immigration department for circulation among Liberal MPs.

It states that although 8.3 per cent of the national work force is jobless, unemployment no longer represents a financial disaster.

The document, made public today by the Progressive Conservative Opposition, says that although unemployment is at its highest level since the 1930s, the problems are not as great as during the Depression because of unemployment insurance and welfare programs.

The Opposition expressed anger at what it called a scurrilous document and attacked the Liberal government in the Commons for failing to find solutions to unemployment.

The major conclusion of the 14-page document was: "We have got no perfect answers to the unemployment problems facing Canada."

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said the government is trying to con the nation by saying unemployment is not a financial disaster when 37 per cent of the unemployed have been jobless for three months and one-half of the unemployed no longer can collect insurance benefits.

Once unemployment insurance benefits were dried up, persons were forced to take welfare.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen retorted that the Newfoundland MP was the con artist for using misleading figures.

Only four per cent of persons whose insurance benefits were exhausted were forced onto welfare.

The document calls the unemployment insurance program "well-conceived and administered."

McGrath said if that statement was true, why had the government initiated a $1 million advertising campaign to warn the public against abusing the program.

Cullen did not reply to that question.

Braefoot: Big Winners . . . Big Losers

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

As suburban blacktopped Saanich creeps remorselessly outward to devour another tract of fields and open spaces on the semi-rural fringes, a real estate bonanza worth millions of dollars is in the offing.

But among the land speculators and retirement nest-egg hoarders involved in the latest area earmarked for development there will be big winners, much smaller winners and also some losers.

Which resident ends up in which category ultimately rests on the map lines drawn by the planners, and the arbitrary decisions of elected officials, acting in what they see to be the best interests of the community.

At a public hearing Thursday night, designed to obtain residents' reaction to a draft plan for the Braefoot area, Saanich planner Dave Harper pointed out that the municipal officials will be cast in the role of referees.

He also said the distinction between the lucky residents and the not-so-lucky ones could be likened to the wayward fortunes of a blindfold darts game:

"If your dart was a lucky one and you bought a parcel in the right area 20 years ago, you stand to make a capital gain."

The public unveiling of the municipality's so-called Braefoot Area Study indicates that if the paper concept becomes reality a process of profound change is about to overtake one of the more attractive districts of rural Saanich.

Bounded roughly by Braefoot, Glendinning, Cedar Hill Road and McKenzie, its northern boundary nestling beneath the lower slopes of Mount Douglas Park, the 125-acre area of gently rolling land is a mixture of hobby farms, large residential lots and undeveloped land covered by native vegetation.

Facing development pressure both within the area (residents petitioning the municipality for sewers) and outside, Saanich planners foresee that this pastoral enclave's future lies in subdivision.

This will transform it into "a traditional single-family neighborhood" with a low-density mixture of housing including single-home lots, duplexes and small, scattered clusters of townhouses.

What is now an area of 62 homes accommodating about 200 residents will, under the draft plan, have the potential to become nearly 400 residential units housing more than 1,200 people.

If municipal officials were expecting some sort of majority view to emerge from Thursday night's meeting they didn't get it, for the reactions generally fell into three groups.

Those supporting the plan were mostly residents who will be able to subdivide their properties into 7,200 and 8,400-square-foot lots. (In the former category, with a potential for up to five lots per acre, some larger holdings of 10 acres or more stand to receive the greatest financial gain).

Some criticizing it were owners of properties on the western edge of the area, between Malton and Braefoot, who will be limited to one-acre lots because they are seen as a buffer between the

Any man who's a keypunch operator shouldn't bother applying for a job with the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Now if that isn't (water) closet discrimination, we don't know what is.

Kathleen Ruff, where are you?

No one would really expect any self-respecting bureaucrat to use the phrase "red tape," and Saanich municipal planner Dave Harper is not about to let the side down.

But at a public meeting Thursday night on a draft plan for the Braefoot area, Harper momentarily slipped up and started to voice the phrase.

His improvised alternative — "the usual procedural delay involved in getting any rezoning application approved" — drew an appreciative chuckle from the audience.

As for us, we prefer red tape. You've got to admit, Dave, it's less of a mouthful and a far more appropriate term for the convoluted workings of bureaucracy.

There appears to be some disagreement whether the Chinese Year of the Horse that started Tuesday will be a year of prosperity or a year of want.

Some old-timers say business will prosper and there will be plenty of fun for people throughout the year.

But a Vancouver restaurateur whose hobby is Chinese astrology says he can't see anything in the stars indicating a prosperous year.

The horse, seventh of 12 animal symbols in the Chinese zodiac, indicates a year of business failures, he says.

And to make matters worse, he adds, it's going to be a wet one.

An old vase and the will to help has earned two Grade 6 students at Monterey School a trip to Vancouver and a television appearance.

Amy Levinson, 11, and Lawney Wright, 12, will be in Vancouver on Sunday to appear on BCTV's Variety Club Telethon from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Amy's grandfather, Dr. Sydney Israels, who recently retired as the head of the University of British Columbia's pediatrics department, is the motivation behind the girls' decision to raise money for the Variety Club.

He received the club's Heart Award in 1977 for the greatest contributon toward the fund drive.

Lawney begged an old vase from her parents so that they could raffle it off.

They canvassed their school chums and collected $40 in quarters.

Amy's father, architect Ben Levinson, said today nobody expected the girls to raise much more than $10 and it is the unexpected backing of the Monterey students that has earned recognition in Vancouver.

Sidney's main drag won't be decorated with flags despite Travel Minister Grace McCarthy's conviction that the sight of flags fluttering in the breeze would somehow attract more tourists.

McCarthy proposed the idea at a meeting with the North Saanich and Sidney chamber last week.

However, the chamber may decide on a modified version — three flagpoles at the end of the government wharf.

•While it is estimated one motorist in 300 on the Lower Mainland is trying to pull a fast one on ICBC by switching licence plates or sharing a set of plates between two cars, motorists in Greater Victoria appear more law-abiding.

A Times survey of about 500 cars parked at city lots Thursday failed to come up with a single example.

Oh, we thought we had found one. A single-plated car was discovered parked in the government employee lot across the street from the Motor Vehicle Branch on Menzies, no less.

But when we finally located the owner, she explained she had just bought the car and had lost the bolts to attach the plate to her vehicle. The plate itself? It was sitting on the front seat of the car.

You can't attract tourists if you're going to be negative about such little things as rainstorms, says Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray. She told a meeting in Seattle that tourist organizations should start promoting the positive side of things.

For example, she said, the steady drizzle can be promoted as part of the great mild marine climate of the west coast and for a slogan, she said, how about "Singing in the Rain?"

Above all, the governor said, Washington must avoid making the kind of mistakes they make up in British Columbia where they spend large amounts to bring in tourists and then there is nothing for them to do and no place for them to stay when they arrive.

Each year the University of Victoria student newspaper, The Martlet, puts out a spoof issue which is usually no worse than the usual college-level attempt at satire.

This year their target is Punk as in punk rock. The layout of several pages consists of a montage of pictures of punk rockers and half-blocked out stories over which someone has scrawled inane graffiti making the satire all but impossible to read.

But the most amazing aspect of the punk section is an advertisement for mr. b'z hairdressing salon in Nootka Court.

The ad is a photograph of a particularly tender part of a woman's anatomy about to be assaulted by a pair of scissors over which the copy tells the reader: "It can hurt just about as much to get a bad haircut."

The ad is for real and mr. b'z says it has elicited a lot of response.

Not surprising.

Be My Valentine

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Love is a two-way street, except on Valentines Day.

Then it is mainly the girls who are pitching and the guys who are catching, according to Victoria card shop employees.

"Most of our Valentine customers are women," says Mrs. Margaret McNamara of Davidson's House of Cards.

"Men buy, too, but usually at the last minute. They will rush in and buy a big card in a hurry. Over-all, it is mostly women who buy Valentines."

Department stores also report three women for every man at the Valentine counters.

Prices are about the same as last year, ranging from about a quarter for kiddie cards to $3, $3.50 or even $5 for the foot-high Valentines. All the big ones are for husband or wife.

Buying is already brisk, especially for relative cards that have to be mailed. This year there are cards for great grandparents as well as for daughters-in-law. You can even send your godfather a Valentine message he cannot refuse.

The love theme is universal in the cards but the expressions are varied.

They range from "I'll never stop loving you" to "Be my valentine . . . or I'll kick you in the butt."

Humorous cards are the favorites among teen-agers and young adults.

For guys there is: "I didn't realize how beautiful you were . . . until I started drinking."

For girls a favorite is: "I may not be rich or beautiful or smart but I have one attractive quality . . . I'll say yes."

For the younger set, there is a proliferation of Peanuts cards, usually featuring Snoopy as the great lover, Lucy as the eternal optimist, and Charlie Brown as the big loser.

Women's Lib seems to have made an impact and there is only a handful of Valentines this year addressed "to my better half."

For those looking for something different, one card has a cowboy saying: "Ah'm sending this Valentine across the miles to yew. If yew won't be my valentine, ah don't know whut ah wull do."

In the next panel the cowboy gets kissed by his horse but the story continues and they all live happily ever after.

One card selling well says: "Darling, I couldn't decide whether to get you what you want or what you need. I know what you want . . . but what you need is a cold shower."

A favorite for men is: "Before I met you I was troubled by wicked thoughts . . . now I enjoy them."

Young Calls For Joint Film Review

Controversial films should be screened by a joint police-school board committee before they are shown in classes, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said today.

Young, who is police board chairman, said he regrets the controversial film, How to Say No to a Rapist, was shown to girls at Esquimalt high school last week by a police constable.

"Someone must take the responsibility of reviewing all kinds of controversial films," said Young.

His daughter was one of the girls who saw the 15-minute movie produced by Fred Storaska, who tells women injury and death can be avoided by playing up to a rapist.

"She (Young's daughter) said there was nothing wrong with the film and that may be true, but there was certainly something wrong with his advice," Young said.

Womens' groups and rape crisis centres across the country criticized the film as dangerous and police in several cities, including Vancouver, banned it.

"I never gave a thought it would be shown by my own department," Young said.

Members of police and school boards should form a film review committee to avoid similar incidents in the future, Young said.

The showing could damage the credibility of the police when it comes to showing other films in the schools, he said, and parents may not consent so readily.

In future, films should not be selected by the police community relations officer alone, Young suggested.

More intensive training should be given at the B.C. Police Academy in community relations and other specialized areas, he said.

Representatives of Status of Women and Rape Relief have also called for extended police training, particularly in the field of rape and rape counselling.

Police must improve their attitudes toward and their handling of rape victims, Rape Relief worker Rowena Heunnisett said Thursday.

She said police receive 10 or 15 minutes training in counselling and management of rape victims.

Police officers saw nothing wrong with Storaska's film because they don't have enough expertise in the field of rape to understand its implications, Heunnisett said.

The film depicts women as passive frail creatures, while showing men as dominant and masterful, she said.

These stereotypes are wrong and Rape Relief has been working hard to destroy them, she said.

Heunnisett, who teaches a self-defence course, said it is easier than most women think to be assertive, verbally or physically, and take control of a rape situation.

Meanwhile, the controversial film has been sent back to Ontario. Constable Paul Hicks, who showed the film, said he was meetimg today with his superiors for a full discussion.

Dock Fire Reward Rejected

International Telephone and Telegraph has rejected an appeal by the Victoria fire department for reward money in connection with last August's $4 million blaze at Ogden Point dock.

Fire chief Eric Simmons said today the giant corporation, the world's 17th largest, has vetoed his suggestion that a reward of between $10,000 and $20,000 be posted.

Simmons felt the reward would induce someone who might know something about the fire into talking.

Investigators suspect the fire was either deliberately set or started by a mysterious form of spontaneous combustion.

Unionists Step Up Campaign

Members of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council demonstrated again Thursday against non-union contractors and a spokesman said today the campaign is going to be stepped up.

Council organizer Al McMurray said the organized construction workers are extremely upset over the increased use of non-union contractors.

About 35 placard-carrying union workers demonstrated for the second time in 10 days at the site of construction for a station-firehall addition to the Central Saanich municipal Hall. The initial work is being done by Wergeland Construction.

The council members also paraded at the site of an addition to the Royal Oak Shopping plaza, where the work is being done by Darwai Consrtruction.

TEST FOR BANK SUSPECT

A 40-year-old James Bay resident was remanded for psychiatric examination when he appeared in provincial court today charged with attempted robbery with violence at the Bank of Nova Scotia main branch Thursday noon.

The charge states he attempted to obtain money from teller Cheryl May Hooker using threats of violence.

Drapery Suspected In Blaze

Heavy window drapes covering an electric baseboard heater is the suspected cause of a $5,500 fire in an Esquimalt apartment overnight Thursday.

A neighbor turned in the alarm at 2:42 a.m. when fire was noticed in the apartment of Donna Fenlon, 358 West Bay Terrace, who was not at home.

Fire damage was confined to the living room area, but Esquimalt firemen reported heavy smoke damage throughout the suite. Owner Wayne Jackson did not carry insurance.

A Victoria apartment caretaker using a chemical extinguisher was credited with squelching a grease fire Thursday in a tenant's kitchen before firefighters reached the scene.

Supper was being prepared in the suite of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Robichaud, 1764 Oak Bay, when a pan of french fries overheated and set fire to cupboards, causing smoke damage in the room. Repairs were estimated at $1,000.

City Retreats On Hospital

City council backed away Thursday from a head-on confrontation with the province over regional hospital plans, but not before salvos were fired at both the Social Credit government and the Capital Regional Hospital Commission.

At least one alderman tried to call the retreat a victory, but when the smoke had cleared it was obvious that City Hall had hit the brakes in the political game of chicken that was being played over the new Helmcken Road hospital and the future of Victoria General.

In committee last week Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Bob Wright won support for a six-part motion urging that the Helmcken project be delayed two months; that the new hopsital site be officially labelled a poor choice; that the needs of the western community be reassessed; that determination of the location and number of beds at Helmcken and Victoria General be delayed until the assessment is made; that Victoria General be retained as a community hospital with acute care beds and that the regional hospital committee be stripped of its policy decision-making powers.

But when the planning committee's multiple proposal came before full council, Ald. Wright asked that all but the last two points be dropped.

Council later agreed that policy decision-making should be removed from the hospital planning commission and placed with the hospital board, and that the retention of Victoria General should be endorsed.

Dropped were the proposals regarding the Helmcken project.

Wright said that there was no point in City Hall taking a hard line on Helmcken because Health Minister Bob McClelland had made it abundantly clear recently that the project was going ahead no matter what council thought.

Wright said he originally feared that Victoria General was going to be phased out as the new Helmcken hospital came on stream, but McClelland's statements had allayed those fears.

Last Monday McClelland stated that "It is our intention that the present Victoria General site will remain an important centre for health care for many, many years to come."

Wright said that statement by the minister meant the city had been victorious in its fight to see Victoria General maintained as a hospital with acute care beds and emergency services.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, however, called the fight a debacle, with City Hall once more yielding to intimidation from the provincial government.

Blencoe went on to say that he felt McClelland was not being completely honest about what Victoria General's future really was.

The planning committee's recommendation that the health planning committee should lose its policy-making powers also sparked heated debate, with Ald. Bill McElroy supporting the move while Ald. Larry Ryan and Ald. Murray Glazier termed it an unwarranted attack on the commission.

McElroy said he was tired of catching flack for decisions made by a commission that was not answerable to the public.

Of the commission's 14 members only four are elected officials.

McElroy said he was frustrated by "decisions that are made by little gnomes somewhere who go home and turn on Police Woman while I have to sit up and get the telephone calls. I'd like to watch Police Woman some nights too."

Ryan, however, said the "commission was set up because of the ineptitude of politicians . . . the hospital commission has done a good job and should be commended.

Glazier supported Ryan and said that when the original motion had come forward at last week's committee meeting he'd been outraged by it.

Doctors Want Meeting

Officials of the Victoria Medical Society will seek a meeting with the provincial cabinet to discuss the future of Victoria General Hospital.

Dr. Doug Critchley, president, said the decision to approach the cabinet was made at a special executive committee meeting on Thursday.

Critchley said the doctors intend to stress that construction of a replacement facility on the St. Ann's Academy land is still the best and cheapest solution.

If the cabinet cannot be persuaded, Critchley said the doctors will urge the proposed Helmcken Road hospital be built in a single phase instead of the two phases now planned.

Salvage Rebuke by Mayor

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today an article in Thursday's Times concerning police investigations into the disposal of salvage materials from municipal projects could have serious consequences in prejudicing the outcome of those investigations.

He also rebuked Ald. David Paterson for providing information and commenting on the situation, and dissociated himself from the alderman's published statements.

In the item, Paterson said the investigations to date have indicated that 16 employees of the public works department have taken salvage materials from various municipal projects over a four-year period, and that some of the materials taken have been sold to local firms.

But he said he did not believe police would lay charges because the employees concerned were apparently following a long-established practice at the municipal yard.

Couvelier's official statement today said the wording of his Feb. 7 news release announcing that investigations were under way had been agreed by council members and the police department.

"The phrasing was chosen with a view to informing the public of the situation and avoiding any possible prejudicing of future options pending the completion of the investigation," he said.

"I am disappointed that one alderman would have publicly disclosed some information given in confidence.

"I am very surprised the alderman in question, being an employee of the municipality's solicitors, did not appreciate the possible consequences of his comments.

"The statement as published contains at least one error in fact and I dissociate myself from it."

Pricking Out Young Plants

The separation of tiny seedlings and setting them out to grow into strong young plants is quite an ordeal for new gardeners. The job is known as "pricking out" by experienced workers. In February and March it is an indoor task — either in a sunporch or slightly heated greenhouse.

One visual demonstration is worth more than all my words, but the words may serve as a guide when the time comes.

Tackle the job as soon as you see the first pair of true leaves emerging between the seed leaves. The roots will then be advanced enough to take new hold, but not so long as to be badly damaged. There will be little or no wilting at this stage, another advantage. And also the less time spent in the crowded seed box, the more sturdy will be their growth; bushy instead of leggy.

Use a shallow box about 10 by 20 inches or similar. It should be no deeper than three inches and have one-eight-inch spaces between the two pieces of bottom board. Over the bottom put a single sheet of old newspaper to retain the soil mixture.

Mix screened soil from an old compost heap with a handful of screened dampened peatmoss and the same amount of sand to each transplanting box, or flat as it is called.

Fill the flat; level with a piece of wood drawn across the surface, then settle the soil by taping the flatsharply on bench or table. There should now be about a half-inch space between soil level and the top edge of flat for watering without losing soil. Have the mixture pre-dampened just enough that a hole made with a pencil sized dibber remains open to receive the roots.

A general rule is to lift only a half dozen seedlings at one time, separate gently by holding the leaves (not stems) and place one into each hole.

Holes are two inches apart, and deep enough to take the length of root. As each seedling is held in the hole, press the soil against it gently with the dibber to firm the soil for contact. That's all, no fussing.

Snapdragons, patunias lettuce, onions, cauliflower are all set out into flats indoors at this time, singly as described above; and then kept in a light, airy, but slightly warm place until later planting into the open garden.

At least two kinds of plants are handled a bit differently. Lobelias of the annual types, are taken from the seedbox in group of three to five seedings for translanting.

For one thing, seedlings are tiny, another the resulting plant makes a nice rounded group more quickly; thirdly you'll find the slender white stems of lobelia root freely wherever they contact the soil.

Another commonly grown plant to translant two or three together is the annual white alyssum.

Later when pricking out tomato seedlings, each one can be set a trifle lower than in the seedbox, for it will make a few more roots on the buried part of the stem. But don't try this method on seedlings in general.

For the first few days after moving the seedlings have the soil barely damp. The root action is more rapid than if the soil is soaked with water. Water cools at night; and it excludes air between the soil particles — both undesirable conditions in the early life of seedlings.

Within days, new growth will be seen, and the little plants quickly develop a fine sturdiness to delight your gardening heart.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were mixed in active mid-afternoon trading today on the Toronto stock market.

Declines edged advances 156 to 151 with 230 issues unchanged.

Trading halts continued in shares of Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. and Capital Diversified Industries Ltd. pending announcements. Four Seasons, halted at the opening at the company's request, last traded at $4.70 a share and Capital Diversified at $1.30.

Among other industrials, Noranda Mines A climbed 1 to $23⅜, Foodex Systems 70 cents to $5.50, Bell Canada ⅛ to $53, Standard Broadcasting ¼ to $10¼ and Home Oil A ¼ to $40½.

Dome Petroleum slumped 1 to $55⅞, Massey-Ferguson ⅞ to $13¾, Westcoast Petroleum A ½ to $21¼, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ½ to $42¾ and Norcen Energy Resources ⅛ to $16.

Sigma Mines Quebec gained 1 to $34, Giant Yellowknife Mines ⅜ to $12⅞ and Pamour Porcupine A ¼ to $5⅝. Pine Point Mines dropped ⅞ to $21¼ and Roman Corp. ⅝ to $24¾.

New York

The labor department's index of prices of finished goods — the next to last step in the distribution system before merchandise is priced for retail sale — rose 0.6 per cent in the month.

Analysts said both figures came in higher than Wall Street generally had been expecting.

But the news touched off no heavy selling pressure, and analysts said buyers began moving in once it became clear that the market was holding its own.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were fractionally lower in light to moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Massey-Ferguson dipped ⅜ to $14, Great Lakes Paper ⅛ to $24, Bombardier-MLW ⅜ to $5, Bank of Montreal ⅛ to $17¾, Inco A ⅛ to $16⅝ and Denison Mines ¼ to $59½. Hudson's Bay Company gained ¼ at $18⅜, Trimac A 1 at $17, Gulf Oil Canada ⅛ at $28¼ and Noranda A ¼ at $22¾.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market was moderately lower near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index was down three points to 470.3 an hour before the close. Industrial leaders drifted downwards, while gold stocks firmed with higher international bullion prices. Canadian stocks eased.

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 865 head that were mostly feeder cattle and stock calves. There were no slaughter steers or heifers on offer.

D1-2 slaughter cows met a strong market at prices $1 higher. Good bulls also traded $1 higher with good cows and bulls continuing to meet good export demand.

Cows D1-2 30.50-32.50. Good bulls 34-39.75. Good feeder steers met a good demand at fully steady prices while good feeder heifers met a strong demand with sales to $1 higher. Good stock steer calves met a good demand with steady prices. Good stock heifer calves traded up to $3 higher with a strong demand. Feeder cows traded active.

Good feeder steers over 800 pounds 43-44.60, 700-800 pounds 43-49, 600-700 pounds 44-49.60, common and medium over 600 pounds 38-43. Good feeder heifers over 700 pounds 37-42.90, 600-700 pounds 39-44.10, 500-600 pounds 39-43.50, common and medium over 500 pounds 34-38. Feeder cows 28-36.

Good stock steer calves 500-600 pounds 45-51.50, 400-500 pounds 44-50.50.

DEPT. STORE BANKRUPT

MONTREAL (CP) — Dupuis Freres Ltd. has been assigned into bankruptcy in Quebec Superior Court.

The petition was not contested by Dupuis president Yvon Goyette who closed the company's three Montreal department stores Jan. 27, putting about 700 employees out of work.

A bankruptcy petition was filed Jan. 25 by Ballin Manufacturing Co. Inc., an unsecured Dupuis creditor owed $10,000.

The two principal creditors — Royal Bank of Canada and Trust General of Canada — are owed $11.3 million of a total secured debt of $13.2 million, according to a statement filed by Dupuis Freres.

TV 9 Viewers To Voice Their Choice

Channel 9 viewers once again will have a chance to say what shows they want to see on their public television station during Viewers' Choice 1978.

On Saturday, February 11 from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m., Channel 9 will pre-empt the regularly scheduled programs and instead air 20 pilots of proposed series. The home audience will be asked to mark their preferences on a ballot which can be found on Page 4 in this issue.

The pilots will again air on Sunday, Feb. 12 from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. to give viewers another chance to see any segments they may have missed. Viewers are encouraged to watch either or both times, vote, and return their ballots by February 20.

Channel 9 will not air pilots for all shows that might be seen in the coming year. Some series — such as Masterpiece Theatre — are provided for the station as part of its membership in PBS — and do not require a purchasing decision. Others — such as Sesame Street — have demonstrated their popularity and audience support and need not be voted upon again. Still other proposals have not yet reached the pilot stage. However, the reaction to the pilots which are presented will give Channel 9 an indication of the types of programs their viewers prefer.

Many of the pilots to be broadcast are available for purchase through the Station Program Co-operative (SPC). The SPC consists of all PBS stations who wish to acquire public television series for local broadcast. Each participating station is invited to submit program ideas, and to purchase series from the resulting pool. Due to the high cost of television production, enough stations must agree to purchase a series before that show is considered "bought." If the program is bought, only those stations agreeing to the purchase are entitled to air the show. If a program is not bought, it will not be produced (unless outside funding sources are found).

Burnill Clark, KCTS Director of Programming and Operations, said: "We cannot guarantee that a series that is popular in the Northwest will be purchased by the entire system. However, if our viewers indicate a preference for a series that is not bought, we can search elsewhere for similar series to meet their needs. Our audience can be assured, however, that the information they provide is in Viewers' Choice will be a factor in our future program acquisitions."

This year, Viewers' Choice also offers viewers a look at the station's local programming. Presentations will be made on local public affairs, cultural affairs and sports presentations; viewers will be asked to state their opinions on weekly series and on documentary specials.

ACADEMY Award-winning composer Michel LeGrand (Summer of '42) has provided the story — from a childhod memory — and the music for Michel's Mixed-Up Musical Bird, a whimsical tale combining animation and live action on the ABC Afterschool Specials series, Wednesday, Feb. 15, at 4 p.m., on Channel 4.

CBC-Radio Seeks Musicians

CBC Radio's music department has launched national auditions to discover new Canadian concert talent and rediscover seldom heard established professional musicians.

Auditions for solo performers or ensembles up to and including quintets will be held in various CBC regions in the spring and fall of this year. Brochures outlining auditions rules may be obtained from CBC stations or by writing Ms. Heather Wood Smith, Festivals and Special Events, CBC Radio Music, Box 500, Station A, Toronto, Ont. M5W 1E6.

"The growth of professional music-making in Canada has been phenomenal in the last 10 years," says Robert Sunter, head of CBC Radio Music. "CBC Radio Music has tried to keep pace with this development, but at the same time it has been extremely difficult to expose all the young Canadian talent. Some of our young artsists have been around for years, but have not been broadcast on CBC Radio as often as we would like.

"With the national auditions, we intend to keep abreast of the development of young musicians, and to showcase them on our CBC Radio networks."

The CBC's national auditions are open to Canadian citizens or landed immigrants. Entrants must have proof of a minimum of three professional engagements. Artists who have been broadcast nationally by the CBC within the past three years are not eligible.

Successful applicants will be recorded for broadcast on the CBC Stereo network. Unsuccessful applicants may re-apply after 12 months.

CLUES DOWN:

1. RATIONAL not national. The term "social betterment" is so all-encompassing that plans need not be national. They can be very small and quite local or world-wide. To be successful, however, they, at the minimum, must be RATIONAL.
2. FELL not felt. "Maybe" a man can remember "a time" when he FELI wounded, as in war. Very probably a man can remember a number of occasions when he felt wounded, hurt or slighted, etc.
4. TESTED not tasted. One associates extreme impressiveness with things or high performance, etc., such as may be TESTED, rather than the more homely sort of pleasure given by things tasted.
5. REPENTED not relentd or resented. A hoodlum is unpopular in any case, so it's pointless to add "who's resented." He is not characteristically in the position to relent: "REPENTED" is the more convincing case.
12. SLUM not glum. The clue implies that such children are in a condition very difficult to help. However, there may be much you can do to cheer up glum children.
16. ABUSE not amuse. Being outraged is not amusing.
17. LISP not list. There is certainly nothing remarkable about a customer happening to have a LISP. In the sort of store where, normally, only one or two luxury items are bought, it may be noteworthy that a customer should have a whole list of requirements.
18. PRIM not prig. The clue envisages some tendency ("no need") for a young girl to be influenced this way by example, as could more reasonably happen in the case of PRIM. Priggishness is an inherent and objectionable trait.

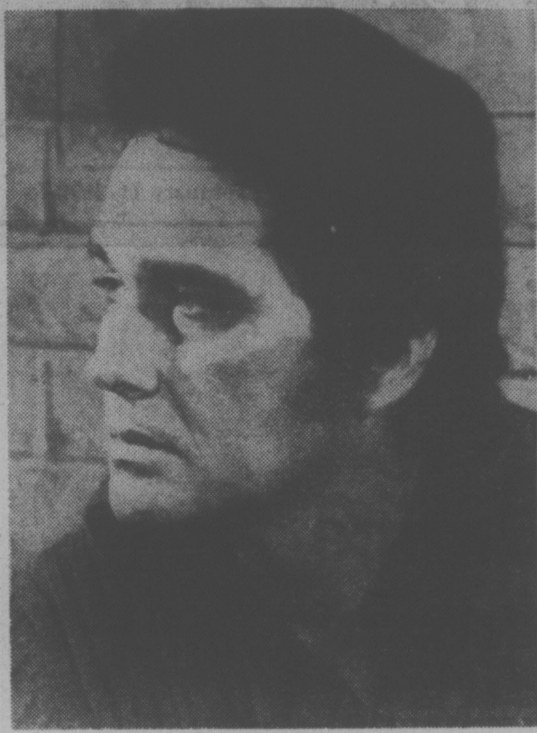
CLUES ACROSS

2. FATTER not faster. "Greed" links up with the idea of wanting greater rather than quicker (perhaps small) profits.
8. LEGS not lens. Keep in mind the walking and climbing needed for scenic photography. Is there such a thing as a "sturdy" lens? The clue would require the plural, "lenses," anyway.
9. VIOLA not villa. The phrasing: "lost in a fire" (rather than, say, destroyed by fire) suits a particular article rather than a whole building.
13. TELL not sell. Since shifty types are always unreliable whatever they sell, it's more a question of when they TELL people "certain" things (ie., involving a motive for deceit). "TELL" tends to embrace the case of "sell," anyway.
14. LAWN not dawn. In the case of dawn, it would be more proper to say it "arrives" rather than "develops."
15. BAD not sad. BAD is the more pointed answer, since a girl will choose the photo in which she looks best, or good. It can be taken for granted that practically any photo will show her not looking at all sad.
18. PAT not pet. Since one can't very well pet a vicious or snappish dog, PAT is the more reasonable answer.
23. SPILL not swill. The clue's convern with expense hints at the question of waste, favoring SPILL. In any case, you may simply choose never to "swill" any drink, anyway.
24. HUNGER not hunter. HUNGER plays its part in the natural scheme of things, but a hunter can be seen as an intruder into the world of animals living in the wild state.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Doc Writes a Novel

By STEVEN SCHEUER



Brett Hasley

NEW YORK — Brett Halsey, General Hospital's nice guy, Dr. Adam Streeter, has traded his stethoscope for a typewriter, now that the series has expanded to a full hour, with actors dragging about, working 12 hours a day to keep up.

But Brett Halsey is in the clear, out hustling his first novel, "The Magnificent Strangers," published by Bantam Books, an opus about the machinations and sexual adventures of American actors in Rome durin the '60s, the golden days of Italian movie-making.

Brett was there from 1962 to 1971, churning out pictures, raking in the loot, living it up, and jotting down juicy incidents.

"That goes in the book" became a favorite Halsey expression. Little by little the notes grew, and when Brett came home to Hollywood, and found nobody knew who he was, he joined the world of soaps, beginning with "Search for Tomorrow" and "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing."

Hearing Halsey talk about his notes of Rome, a producer friend suggested the actor write a 30-page outline. Brett complied, and the producer sent it out to Bantom. Back in New York, editors saw possibilities in the material, but needed proof the actor could write. Halsey than knocked out four chapters, and received an advance in the mail. That was over two years ago.

By averaging two-and-a-half days a week on "Search" and then "Hospital," Brett was able to concetrate on his novel, accomplishing what every writer who visits Rome dreams of doing — capturing the Eternal City on paper.

Surviving the disciplines of novel writing, actor Halsey can hardly wait to get at book number two, this one about the world of soaps. Now Brett will take guest roles in shows like "Bionic Woman" or "Loveboat," but his mind is on his writing. The man dreams about his work, he writes notes in the middle of the night, and takes long walks along the beach when plotting problems that refuse to unravel.

In his second book, Brett intends to dig into his pet hates — commercials and soap writers. Halsey can sympathize with daytime scribblers who often churn out 40 to 50 pages a day, "more than I can just type daily," but when they begin messing around with his characters, watch out.

A sensitive subject is Halsey's experience as Dr. Adam Streeter. "Writers took a strong man, and turned him into a mealy-mouthed jerk," says Brett. "Adam became so awful, I couldn't stand to play the guy any more.

"After a while, you can tell how writers are feeling by reading their scripts," Halsey continued. "A divorce, trouble at home shows up on the printed page. As for humor, soap opera guys simply can't cut it. Their attempts are so pathetic they have to be blue penciled. Though the money is good, you'll find only three or four ace writers.

PLOT PORTENTS: After surviving one brush with death, Arlo refuses to take Larry's advice and leave town on "Days of Our Lives." The elevator incident with Marlena could change Fred Barton's attitude about psychiatric help, but Fred won't admit this to himself. Linda faces another roadblock as Bob ducks the question of marriage again.

Good progress reports on Vanessa's facial operation mean a change in attitude from the vengeful lady on "The Young and the Restless." Leslie still refuses to speak to her sister Lorie regardless of their father's pleas, and Jill begins to see Derek in another light.

Dorian starts making moves toward Peter but he's not buying any of it on "One Life to Live." Becky and Richard are arrested after a fight breaks out between Margo and him at the Blue Ridge Club.

Phoebe Tyler comes home from the hospital in "All My Children." Ruth discovers that while she was unconscious, her assailant raped her, and this brings on a hysterical reaction, of course.

"Edge of Night" fans will be happy to hear that April pulls through the big operation and Kevin has second troughts about going ahead with his protest declaration against the local Crime Commission.

Poor Mel is in jail on "Forever Fernwood" this week, but Merle, Cathy and Eleanor come to his aid. Tom learns that Heather may be alive; Wanda receives encouragement regarding her punk fashions; and Merle is fooling around with Eleanor. As for Tom, he's ready to propose.

NFB Earns U.S. Award

The Los Angeles Film Teachers Association has presented the National Film Board with its Jean Renoir Humanities Award, given to commemorate the work of the great French film maker.

The Board's acclaimed feature film J. A. Martin, Photographe, and the prize-winning short Sand Castle were screened for the more than 400 members of the association.

Alice Ladine, President of the Los Angeles Film Teachers Association, said the group honored the NFB because "its films have provided us an impetus toward the spiritual and have uplifted the heart of those who have seen them."

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE

THIS WEEK'S PRIZE IS $100.00
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE ON PAGE 2

CONTEST RULES

1. Solve the Prevue Payoff Puzzle by filling in the missing letters to make the words that you think best fit the clues. To do this read each clue carefully for you must think them out and give every word its true meaning.

2. Check the word list. It has all the correct answers plus some you will have to eliminate.

3. You need not be a subscriber to this newspaper in order to enter. You may submit as many entries as you wish on the entry blank printed in this newspaper or exact-sized, clear, hand-drawn facsimiles of the printed entry blank. NO MECHANICALLY PRODUCED, PRINTED, MIMEOGRAPHED, etc. copies of the entry blank will be accepted. Each entry must contain the contestant's name, address and phone number or it will not be accepted.

4. Anyone is eligible to enter this contest except employees (and members of their families) of Victoria Press Ltd.

5. All entries MUST be mailed and bear a postmark. The paper is not responsible for entries lost or delayed in the mail. Entries for each week's contest not received for judging by 12 noon the following Wednesday are not eligible.

6. To qualify you must write your answer to one of the clues on the outside of the envelope. See coupon for instructions.

7. Prevue will award the current prize to the contestant who sends in an all correct solution. If more than one all correct solution is received the prize money will be shared equally. If no all correct solution is received, $50 will be added to the following week's prize.

8. There is only one correct solution to each puzzle and only the correct answer can win. The decision of the judges is final and all contestants agree to abide by the judges decision. All entries become the property of Prevue. Only one prize will be awarded to a family unit.

9. Everyone has the same opportunity to win for EVERY QUALIFIED ENTRY WILL BE CHECKED and the winner announced. No claiming is necessary.

10. Entries must be mailed to Prevue Payoff Puzzle, Victoria Press Ltd., Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4. One entry per envelope.

11. Prevue reserves the right to correct any typographical errors which may appear during the puzzle game.

12. Puzzle clues may be abbreviated and such words as AN, THE and A omitted.

PREVUE PAYOFF PUZZLE is the intriguing word puzzle game the whole family will enjoy and have an opportunity to win a big cash award every week!

THIS CROSSWORD is not a game of chance or a draw. It tests your knowledge of words and pays off for EVERY correct solution. All you have to do is complete each of the words in a criss-cross format. Clues are provided . . . even a word list which has all the correct answers, plus some you'll have to eliminate. But there are no trick words or guessing . . . careful thought will make you a winner! So start and play today!

PLEASE NOTE: EACH ENTRY MUST BE IN A SEPARATE ENVELOPE

Spotlight on The Great Whales

Grim scenes of slaughter; life and death encounters between protesters and whalers; and fascinating scientific reports, including extraordinary film footage of the birth of a killer whale highlights "The Great Whales," the third in the new season of National Geographic Specials, airing Thursday, February 16 at 8 p.m. (rebroadcast Monday, Feb. 20 at 9 p.m.) on Public TV 9. The documentary is narrated by Alexander Scourby and hosted by E. G Marshall.

The whale is the largest creature ever to inhabit the earth — including the prehistoric dinosaurs. The largest blue whale weighs up to 196 tons and the body spans up to 100 feet — about the size of a jetliner seating more than 100 passengers. The mammals left the land to dwell in the sea over 60 million years ago and, until recent scientific understanding, have invoked mortal fear perpetuated by legend and myth — Jonah and the Whale, Moby Dick, man-eating sea monster.

The whale has become a focal point for zoological researchers who have dispelled the "killer" myth with proof of their highly social behavior and remarkable intelligence. Not only do they learn at an extraordinary rate but they playfully enjoy the attention and blatantly bid for man's affection, as marine scientists demonstrate at San Diego's Sea World.

In Jacksonville, Florida, National Georgraphic cameras record the grim beaching process which is a common phenomenon that still eludes researchers' explanation. Also, the United States Navy displays their experimental whale training program where the mammal's unexceeded diving capabilities have made possible a safe and accurate weapons recovery technique.

The special also includes footage of the playful humpback whales, the recorded crooners of the sea, who "sing" to one another as they frolic in the depths.

"The Great Whales" unwraps some of the mysteries of these elusive giants of the oceans, and provides us with a rare opportunity to see them in their natural underwater world.

Laugh Track 'Important'

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Why must TV comedies have a laugh track? George Schlatter offers this theory: The audience would feel a key ingredient is lacking.

"The laugh track is now used to such a degree that the home audience really expects it," Schlatter said in an interview. "Without a laugh track, they're just sitting there hanging.

"The trick is to under-use it. Many times we even take out laughs because they go on just too long and overlap the dialogue."

Schlatter, whose Laugh-In specials this season had studio audiences ranging from 25 to 300 fans, has more of a laugh track problem than sitcom-makers. For starters, his skits and gags are not taped in sequence.

The work is stop-and-go. Some is outside the studio. It is all literally pieced together in the editing room. Each show, he said, averages 1,100 tape edits, 300 film edits and 300 sound effects.

The effects, dialogue, music and laughter are taped on separate tracks, then mixed together in the show we see. The laugh track uses chortles from audiences actually present at various tapings.

But canned laughter also back scenes unattended by the public, like a skit filmed in downtown Burbank. It is a major task to avoid any hint the laughter, like the show, comes in bits and pieces.

The Laugh-in laughmeister, whom Schlatter considers a virtuoso, is John Pratt, a lean, soft-spoken veteran of 35 years in sound, 16 of them as one of Hollywood's handful of laugh track experts.

Pratt estimated that his company currently handles laughter for 20 shows a week, most of them situation comedies.

He said there's a misconception about what he does.

"Eighty-five per cent of the work we do now is shot in front of an audience. We reinsert their own material," he said, referring to laughter of an audience present during a show's taping.

Like Schlatter, Pratt said he feels that, when using either imported or domestic studio laughter, "less is best."

In the 1950s, when canned chuckles came to TV, he said, producers treated it like a new toy, demanding a full-volume roar for even the most feeble joke, but they are in the minority now.

Sad news for laugh-track foes: neither laugh-tender Pratt nor Laugh-In producer Schlatter thinks it is in danger of extinction.

Appealing Tudor with Comfort

This charmingly traditional Tudor design, finished in mixed stucco, brick and board, and cedar shake or shingled roof, offers the ultimate in visual appeal while providing for maximum comfort, convenience and flexibility of interior layout.

The sunken, L-shaped living/dining room combination, with its diamond-paned windows, emphasizes the mood of warmth and conviviality which this home possesses. The dining room separates via pocket door from the kitchen/nook combination, providing privacy for formal dining.

Practically, comfort and convenience are the characteristics of the kitchen/nook and family room combination. The well-planned galley-style kitchen has an interesting corner sink and good natural light. The nook may be finished as either a snack bar counter or as a full dining facility: The family room area features a corner brick fireplace, complete with barbecue on the patio side, affording the young family the greatest possible convenience for casual indoor or relaxed outdoor dining.

A wide rear patio, connected to the family room via sliding glass doors, and a two-piece vanity bathroom, central to all rooms, complete the downstairs conveniences of this home.

Depending upon family size, the upstairs may be finished with either three or four bedrooms. With either layout, the master will have a three-piece ensuite bath with shower, and all the bedrooms will have good natural light and generous closets.

The attic, accessbile from the upstairs hallway, allows ample upstairs storage space, or may be finished as a play area or family lounge for smaller children. The full basement provides ample storage area, or may be finished as further recreational facilities.

Plans for Design No. 76-1666 may be obtained at a cost of $60.00 of the first set and $9.00 for each additional set, plus $4.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7 per cent sales tax.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD—The TV mailbag:

Q. How about some background on the guy who plays Jon Baker in "CHiPs?"—L.C., Victoria, B.C.

A. Larry Wilcox, the sunny-faced "rock" on which the CHP team of "Jon and Ponch" rests, has many of the personal qualities of the character he is playing. Chief among these are total professionalism and dependability, whether he is working the rodeo circuit, riding a motorcycle, serving as a combat soldier or acting in front of a camera.

The San Diego-born Wilcox was brought up in Wyoming and horseback riding and expertise with a lasso become second nature to him. His ability on a motorcycle comes from his training by experts of the California Highway Patrol. He saw combat in Vietnam.

His acting credits range from Disney films and "Lassie," to television, movies and appearances on "Police Story," "M-A-S-H," "The Streets of San Francisco" and "Hawaii Five-O."

An amateur musician, Wilcox has also written screenplays and is interested in television directing. His weekends are spent in roping competition on the rodeo circuit and in practicing motorcycle maneuvers which may be used during the filming of the "CHiPs" series. Wilcox is married and has two children.

Q. Where can I write to Cheryl Ladd of "Charlie's Angels?"—F. B., San Francisco, Calif.

A. I suggest you write to Spelling-Goldberg Production, in care of 20th Century Fox Film Corp., P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90213.

Q. Please settle a family dispute. did Dennis Weaver play the role of Festus in the series "Gunsmoke?"—J. D., Scottsdale, Ariz.

A. Weaver played the role of Chester Good while Ken Kurtis played Festus.

Q. I understand Dan Haggerty of "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" was seriously burned recently and he will not be appearing in several episodes. Is this true?—K. L., Washington, Pa.

A. Haggerty was attending his birthday party recently when a flaming drink was spilled on him. He was burned on the hands and forearms but not his face. His beard also was slightly singed. His injuries were not too serious. since the series film company was about to go on holiday hiatus, the production schedule was not interrupted. Haggerty returned to work in mid-January.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

BOOKS

Pat Barclay

Dennis Lee is a worried man. Like most of us from time to time, he's looked at the world he inhabits and wondered how long it's been since anyone could feel truly confident about its future.

But where Dennis Lee differs from you and me is in his unwillingness to settle for the occasional worrying spell. Lee is an intellectual activist, still probing the ground he broke in 1968 with "Civil Elegies": ". . . My whole life aches, the streets I walk along to work declare / your absence . . . Master and Lord, there was a / measure once. / There was a time when men could say / my life, my job, my home / and still feel clean . . ."

Now, in Savage Fields: An Essay in Literature and Cosmology, Lee seeks to grapple with the problem of despair. ("The most difficult, unacceptable, wholly subversive thought (today) is joy", he writes. But he is speaking generally; obviously, the author of Alligator Pie has discovered a personal solution.) What he's after in this new book is to make sense of the "terrible era of modernity", and he's done it by inventing a new cosmology of the world which he calls "savage fields".

As I understand it (and believe me, from here on in you may be seeing through a glass more darkly than you know), Lee's cosmology divides our planet into two warring forces which he terms "world" and "earth". "World" encompasses everything that is conscious, manipulative and dominating. "Earth" means all that is "material, alive, and powered by un-self-conscious instinct".

But "earth" and "world" are not separate entities. "World" has encroached on "earth" so much that no place on the planet is free of its influence. And "earth" has a disconcerting way of reminding "world" that everything that it is, it owes to "earth". The result is that each thing must "obey the logic of both domains it inhabits", and "enact their murderous jangling in its own being." " 'To be' ", concludes Lee succinctly, "is to be in strife."

Lee tells us that the idea behind all this grew out of his attempts to analyze certain contemporary works of fiction. He confesses that he was "obscurely stymied" by these books, for they make "silent assumptions" about the world which were unfamiliar. Lee set himself the task of understanding the assumptions and inventing a "conceptual language" which would explain them. The result is Savage Fields.

Lee is quick to point out that his cosmology may apply to areas other than literature. (The most obvious application would be to environmental issues, where the strife between technological growth and human health, let alone such luxuries as greenspace and clean air, is rampant. But Lee declares himself reluctant to "coax and jimmy" the ecological crisis on to "some conceptual grid", and drops that hot potato the moment he picks it up.)

So a prominent feature of Savage Fields is its open-endedness. Lee's own thoughts on the subject are anything but complete, and he acknowledges that if his model is to be of any practical value at all, other minds must share in its application. What he does give us is an analysis of two works of fiction, Michael Ondaatje's The Collected Works of Billy the Kid, and Leonard Cohen's Beautiful Losers, as they are illuminated by the concept of "savage fields".

Here Lee is less convincing. He assembles an impressive portrait of Billy as a creature caught between the warring forces of "world" and "earth, but he ignores both Pat Garrett, Billy's killer, who seems to be the embodiment of "world" only, and Sallie Chisum, the wife of Billy's friend John, who is an equally potent representative of "earth" and at war with absolutely nobody.

We can be grateful to Dennis Lee, though, for making some sense at last of Beautiful Losers. Here Lee detects a fleeting ray of hope in the figure of Edith, whom he takes to represent "the Isis continuum" of love, unity and holiness. (I detected it too, and thought it was a real link with Sallie, and that maybe an awakened womankind asserting those basic values which men are too full of their own importance to see would be the salvation of the planet after all, but after a bit I calmed down and decided it was only a hot flash of feminist exuberance. Oh well.)

Anyway, Savage Fields is obviously not your average cup of tea. It's more of an honest, thoughtful and timely preliminary report. We can expect to hear from Dennis Lee, intellectual activist, on this vital subject again.

SAVAGE FIELDS: An Essay in Literature and Cosmology, by Dennis Lee. Anansi. $12.95, cloth; $5.95, paper.

In the end, no union, no fishplants, no jobs

Strikes Are Not Romantic

By DARCY KAVANAUGH

Books on labor conflicts both in this country and abroad have become almost numbingly commonplace these days. But it's doubtful there's another study quite like Silver Donald Cameron's look at the Nova Scotia fishermen's strike of 1970-71.

In diagnosing the story of some 250 fishermen along the Canso Strait, who tried to organize a union so they could get a fair shake from the Maritimes fishing companies, Cameron has produced a rich, fascinating book that's too romantic for its own good.

His subject is a good one. The fishermen's strike split the province into bitter, reactionary camps and sent the powers of Canadian labor into fits of anxiety. The results of the strike were numerous and are still being felt.

When Cameron the reporter is at work, the book is fast-paced and superb. His descriptions of a working life at sea and union backroom double-dealing are memorable.

When Cameron the romantic is at the controls, however, there's a hazy approach to the conflict. One chapter is actually a long, personal letter to his hero Everett Richardson, a fisherman centrally involved in the strike. It's a touching letter but unnecessarily diverting.

There's also a romantic, needless quality about the last chapter in which Cameron writes how he and several fishermen sat for hours after the strike and he read his manuscript. It's also a dangerous addition, since it might lead the reader to doubt Cameron's ability to relate the situation as it was.

The main thread of the book is Cameron's incisive study of Richardson. Stripped of its occasional sentimentality, it's an enthralling look at a fortyish family man who went into the strike completely naive about unionism and, after the strike, emerged a strong, knowledgeable unionist.

Richardson became a cause celebre during the strike. No more militant than many other fishermen involved, he incurred a nine-month jail sentence as an "example" to others fighting in the front line for a union. The sentence rocked the province and widened public notice of the strike.

The fishermen fought long odds. They were forced to combat the fishing companies' intransigence, judicial sell-outs, Eastern establishment paranoia, and their own internal bickering.

There was also the conflict between the Canadian Food and Allied Workers and Homer Stevens of the West Coast United Fishermen and Allied Workers. From the start of the strike, Stevens helped the fishermen in their struggle to get a union of their own choosing. When it appeared that Stevens' work was about to pay off, the Canadian Food and Allied Workers jumped into the melee, trying to sign up the fishermen. The union fighting became extremely bitter and particularly toward Stevens, an avowed Communist.

In the end, no one won. Cameron attempts to conjure a moral victory for the fishermen. Maybe there truly was one. But on the last page there's no union, no fishplants and no jobs.

The fishermen's strike was a valiant, dramatic effort which brought unhappy, ugly results to many factions. Romantic? Hardly. It's too bad Cameron the romantic didn't realize that and turn the whole book over to Cameron the reporter.

The Women Work Harder

By TONY DICKASON

Plucky is the word for 24-year-old Zoe (Greek for "life") Landale, a young lady who is not all that fond of fish but enjoys work, thrills, and reasonable money success.

She and husband Conde have been fishing aboard their own trollers on the West Coast since she was aged 18, both from university.

(I've been aboard fishing boats a few times only, anchored ashore overnight, sustaining bumps on the head. Too tall. So personal knowledge of the job's ups and downs is zilch).

There are few women aboard fishing boats; only a small number of distaff deckhands and a handful of operator-owners.

But these women are said to be harder workers than the men. At any rate, Zoe Landale believes this. (If women are truly liberated, they shouldn't do this much, should they?)

She writes sensibly concerning extended Coast Guard service, risks in both personnel and money, and a plethora of facts about gear and, of course, fish.

And Zoe is "write on" concerning fishing facts. Thus: "While I won't go so far as to claim that all fishermen are liars, it would probably be fair to say that 96 per cent are, and the remaining four per cent will misdirect you in some form or another."

Further: "Fish are the only subject that fishermen are definite about — never in their lives have they seen or heard of anything so shocking as the state of fishing at that precise time."

Apart from fish, the writer has a sensitive touch of beauty — mountains, trees, the sky. Several short passages are well worth reading twice; at least my pleasure was reflected.

"Salmon" is an area book, limited, but informative and enjoyable.

HARVEST OF SALMON: Adventures in Fishing the B.C. Coast, by Zoe Landale. Hancock House. $9.95.

In the Days When Music Was Music

Buddy Rich at work . . . every night an expectation

By JACK SCOTT

It's a sure way, of course, to empty a room of all persons under the age of 30, but the fact must be faced. Popular music has fallen upon evil days.

To listen to the sounds that spew from almost any radio station, the mewling, repetitious, jangling, vocal discords that pass as the serious state of the current art of music, musicians and musicianship is a particular agony for those of us who grew up with jazz and the big bands.

Frank Sinatra, an illustrious alumni of that ancient era, the 1920s and 30s, writes of "impeccable musicianship" and "the betterment of musical values and standards." He noted: "They played for fans who wanted to listen, think and even analyze. The bands moulded everyone's musical tastes. Their listeners were emotionally and physically involved . . . the bands were a healthy and meaningful pastime." Nobody — but nobody — has ever said the same of rock.

George T. Simon, in an introduction to his encyclopedic "The Big Bands," writes: "I can never completely contain my enthusiasm and respect for true musical creativity, talent and, above all, integrity . . . My deepest thanks go to all the many magnificent, creative people for whose outstanding musical contributions all of us who ever loved the big bands will be forever grateful." Nobody — but nobody — will ever write such a tribute to the present-day garbagemen of music.

Jazz Was Everywhere

"In one form or another," notes Whitney Balliett in one of his profiles, "big bands, small bands, trios, solo pianists — jazz was everywhere in this country in the late thirties and early forties. Five or six nights a week at 11 p.m. the three radio networks broadcast live music from Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston, and points between, and myriad local wires placed in clubs and roadhouses sustained the faithful for fifty miles around. Indeed, jazz of some sort could be heard in countless clubs and roadhouses as well as in hotels and ballrooms and theatres . . . Every town of five thousand and over had a record store with at least one listening booth where you could sift the dozen or so new releases that came in every week, and there was no problem, as there is now, in ordering special records like the Jones-Collins Astoria Hot-Eight's 'Tip Easy Blues' on Bluebird, or Albert Ammons' 'Bass Goin' Crazy' on twelve-inch Blue Note."

It's not that the music is dead. There is, in fact, a kind of renaissance in jazz, an older generation still reacts to it, or reacts as much as they do to anything. Many big bands are at least surviving — Woody Herman, Count Basie, Buddy Rich and a few others make sporadic appearances despite their great age — and Bob Smith's CBC program, Hot Air, is still, incredibly, with us.

Yet both these books — Balliett's portraits of 16 famous jazz musicians, Vance's affectionate, if shallow, biography of Thomas Wright "Fats" Waller — must be put under the heading of nostalgia. They evoke an age that, regrettably, is no longer with us.

FATS WALLER: His Life and Times, by Joel Vance. Beaverbooks. $10.95.

GRAPPELLI . . . whisky helps

Of the two, Balliett's book is by far the best. A long-time contributor to The New Yorker magazine, where all of these pieces originated, Balliett's technique is simple and effective. He opens the microphone of a tape recorder and lets his relaxed subject do the preliminary work (a great deal of editing and revision obviously goes into the finished product).

Thus we have some unforgettable first-hand impressions of Pee Wee Russell and Red Allan, both now deceased, King Oliver, who had such an influence on Louis Armstrong, Earl "Fatha" Hines, Mary Lou Williams, Jess Stacey, Red Norvo, Sid Catlett and many another great.

A monologue of particular interest to Victorians comes from Stephane Grappelli, the ebullient French jazz violinist who once shepherded the Gypsy guitarist, Django Reinhart. Grappelli keeps Victoria on his concert list and at 70 or more never played better.

Balliett quotes him in a manner that will delight every admirer: "Before you play, you must prepare your way — first your violin and next yourself. If I'm doing a concert, I must have a good diet and I must be in the theatre at least one hour before. I must not be distracted by anything — disease, chagrin or too much sadness, although being sad is sometimes a great help to my playing. Not too long before I play, I take a large whisky to give me courage. Fifty years ago, Maurice Chevalier told me, 'You must start well and you must end well. What is in the middle is not so important, because no one is listening.' The alcohol makes its effect. It liberates me and I'm free to improvise."

Balliett provides a theme for such disparate remembrances through his fascination, shared by every jazz-lover, with the gift, shared by every jazz player, of improvisation. Alec Wilder called it "the creative mystery of our age" and went on, "I wish to God that some neurologist would sit down and figure out how the improviser's brain works, how, in God's name, his mind works so damned fast!"

In what must be one of the more comical proof-reader's errors, the dust-jacket of Balliett's book suggests that some jazz greats are "baffled and driven into articulateness" in describing this knack of original phrasing. Fact is, most are inarticulate.

"Sometimes you get cold, you freeze up, but you just play until the inspiration comes. You play what you know, and play it as well as you can, and then the feeling starts. A bad audience or a waiter dropping a tray can take your inspiration. If you have a dead rhythm section, you shut it out of your mind, and you learn this the hard way. If you make a mistake, you work something good out of that mistake. We were doing 'How High The Moon' a while ago, and I hit a wrong note in a chord, and what I did was go off immediately on a different tack and work that wrong note into a pattern that fitted. It sounded way out, but it was all right."

It's What You Feel

Another who seems able to put it into words is "Buddy" Rich, and his thoughts on drumming will surely be applauded by every lover of jazz.

"Maybe my technique is greased elbows and maybe it's because The Man Upstairs talked to my hands and said, 'Be fast' and they were," Rich mused. "I've never had a lesson in my life and I never practise. I stay away from drums during my daytime adventures. You won't find a pair of sticks or a practice pad or anything connected with drumming in my house or my hotel room. That way each night is an expectation, a new experience for me. All these guys get from practising is tired wrists. If you have something to play, you hear it in your heart and mind, and then you go and try it out in front of an audience . . . What comes out is what you feel."

Such thoughts-out-loud make "Improvising" a well-nigh indispensable book for anyone past 30.

The same can't be said, unfortunately, of Vance's biography of "Fats" Waller, which is no more than an interesting postscript to a golden age. It does, however, put into historic perspective the fact that Waller, whose fame came from his buffoonery, was, in fact, an accomplished musician who pioneered the organ as a jazz instrument and wrote some of the enduring tunes with which he is associated, including "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Black and Blue," "Honeysuckle Rose" and "Squeeze Me." (An extremely casual man with money, Fats sold 30 tunes, including "Ain't Misbehavin' and "Honeysuckle Rose," for $500.)

An Emotional Man

Those of us who think only of Waller as a musical clown will be particularly interested in Vance's vignette of recording sessions:

"There is a running strain of wistfulness which comes close to melancholy, for Waller's organ-playing always contained a good deal of sentiment. This is not surprising, since Waller learned to play the harmonium as a boy after hearing his mother accompany family hymn singing on that instrument. When he was in England in 1938 for the first of his European tours he recorded a series of spirituals which have a thrilling majesty about them, but they are also demonstrations of an emotional man controlling strong emotions with difficulty. At one of the sessions he began to record 'Abide With Me', his mother's favorite hymn, but collapsed in tears when thinking of her death."

As might be expected (Balliett's book, too, documents the alcohol-content that must be admitted in the jazz story) Fats was a prodigious boozer, which surely contributed to his premature death this side of 40, though it was officially of bronchial pneumonia.

Vance, an editor of Stereo Review, has some comment that adds a footnote to that: "He was never nasty or hostile, and seldom maudlin. He came to happy terms with drinking: he wanted to be carefree and generous and a good load of "Grandfather" (Old Grandad, his favorite bourbon) only gave him more impulse to be so . . . Sober musicians of talent have wrestled for their entire careers with the question of when they should play by the book and when they should throw the book away. Waller never had to face that dilemma. Liquor didn't free him. It simply made his expression of freedom that much more pleasant."

E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Mansfield and Bowen: One talented, the other prolific

Virginia Woolf died in 1941 after producing several major novels. Elizabeth Bowen died in 1973 with 27 novels to her credit, as well as short stories and a lot of non-fiction work. While it is still too soon to assess precisely their place among 20th century novelists, we do at least have something substantial to go on. But Katharine Mansfield, who died 55 years ago and published only three collections of short stories, is infinitely harder to place.

Katharine Mansfield's husband, John Middleton Murry, in defiance of his wife's deathbed plea to destroy most of her papers, published everything he could lay his hands on — a few stories, her journals and her letters, even the most intimate of those written to him. His efforts brought him royalties and opprobrium, and increased her fame.

There is nothing left to be revealed, so when C. K. Stead, professor of English at the University of Auckland, wished to honor his fellow New Zealander the best he could do was edit a selection of already-published journals and letters. However, the book is worthwhile for two reasons — the selection is biased away from the personal and towards the literary, and the 11-page Introduction is extremely interesting.

Katharine Mansfield contracted tuberculosis when she was 29 and died of it at the tragically early age of 34. She was condemned to go alone from place to place in Europe, and from charlatan to charlatan, in search of a cure. She was in pain, she felt deserted by her husband, and, loving life, she feared death. She said suffering had taught her to look on the world with love.

Suffering is said to have given her stories the sensitivity for which she was widely praised. Stead is wary of her sensibility, and rightly so. Her best work was satirical, full of a robust, anarchic intelligence. D.H. Lawrence recognized her comic talent when he said her nearest literary relative was Dickens.

Stead feels that because her suffering made her ashamed of her satirical self, she tried to keep it submerged so as not to inflict pain on others. It's a fact that her best stories, in which she caricatures her subjects, were considered to be cruel, but they were the real Katharine Mansfield, the one who sums up her feeling in a letter to a friend: "Yearning sentimental writing about a virginia creeper and the small haigh voices of tainy children is more than I can stick."

A few months before she died she wrote to her husband: "I want to write — but differently — far more steadily . . ." And in her very last letter she wrote: "I am tired of my little stories like birds bred in cages." Clearly, she was on the verge of writing a novel and Stead is convinced that had she lived long enough to do so the novel would have had a Dickensian flavor.

After reminding us of her immense talent, her extraordinary visual memory, the acuteness of her ear both for speech and indiscriminate sounds, her subtlety in dealing with human feeling, and her ability to create and manipulate convincing dialogue, as well as the all-pervasive freshness of her writing, he claims that her natural talents in fiction were superior to all her contemporaries except D. H. Lawrence. And, please remember, her contemporaries included E. M. Forster and Virginia Woolf!

Has C. K. Stead allowed himself to be carried away by sympathy and admiration? I don't think so. The confirmation is supplied by Virginia Woolf, who endured a love-hate relationship with Katharine Mansfield. Mansfield saw through Woolf. She saw her as an intellectual snob who was cold and indifferent to people, and she saw this in her writing and had the courage to say so when reviewing Woolf's books.

When she learned of Mansfield's death Virginia Woolf confided to her diary: "I was jealous of her writing. The only writing I have ever been jealous of."

What a tragedy that such a talent died so young, with its promise unfulfilled. She didn't have time or strength to write much, but her few stories have never been out of print — but for the wrong reason. She is remembered as some kind of mystic who sought truth through love, which is a fiction built on her last desperate efforts to stay alive, and sustained after her death by her husband's critical commentaries.

The truth is that she was filled with humor, a humor apparent in her letters (and in her book reviews when she could render a book absurd merely by retelling its story). As Professor Stead correctly states, there was nothing mystical about Katharine Mansfield that antibiotics would not have cured.

Katharine Mansfield had the potential to become the greatest novelist of this century but, by default, the palm will probably go to her inferior, Virginia Woolf. Where does that place Elizabeth Bowen? She died in 1973 so there hasn't been time to make an adequate assessment. My educated guess is that in 20 years she will be considered an also-ran.

That is certainly not the opinion of Victoria Glendenning, whose biography of Elizabeth Bowen was published recently. She places Bowen in the top ten of British novelists, and I must admit she makes a strong case to support her claim. In fact, this biography is the most entertaining and best written portrait of a writer that I have read in years.

Bowen, literary link between Virginia Woolf and Iris Murdoch and Muriel Spark, wrote brilliantly, never more so than in The Death of the Heart, The Heat of the Day, and The House in Paris. Most of her work had an ironic atmosphere, a lyrical rhythm, and a Jane Austen-like pent-up intensity. In her later work she took the lid off society and allowed tensions to surface.

Miss Glendenning has a deep understanding of Bowen's work and Bowen's complex personality and she analyzes both intelligently, stepping back from her subject to view her whole and in perspective. She never gushes and she never bores.

This is a fine portrait of Bowen, last of the Anglo-Irish literary figures, the Bowen raised by a committee of aunts (an influential aunt-figure appears in all her works) who was intelligent but not intellectual and who lacked a trained mind (a dubious asset) and even a specialist's knowledge of English literature; who was frightfully ladylike but had an underlying gypsy romanticism with a touch of vulgarity; who was both a gregarious hostess and a very private person; who loved, but was not in love with, a dull husband and who treasured her sound marriage but had affairs and a long-lasting, until-death intimate relationship with Canadian diplomat Charles Ritchie (who was no mean diarist — see The Siren Years).

This major novelist, who lived a sort of protracted childhood, as opposed to unrelinquished adolescence, has in Victoria Glendenning an able and sympathetic biographer who has placed her subject on a pedestal but had the good sense not to try to conceal the feet of clay. More than a brilliant portrait of a writer, it is the story of a brilliant woman of paradoxes.

THE LETTERS AND JOURNALS OF KATHARINE MANSFIELD: A Selection, edited by C. K. Stead. Longman. $13.95

'A New Novelist of Authentic Power and Grace'

By ROBERT FULFORD

Marvellous things began to happen to American writing in the 1960s when black authors became an established part of the literary landscape. And in the 1970s some equally marvellous things began to happen when a new generation of women authors began to feel easy about writing bluntly on subjects that were once thought unwomanly.

The talent of Toni Morrison, a 46-year-old black woman, lies roughly at the juncture of those two forces. But it would be a mistake to describe her as nothing more than a happy accident of literary history. She is also an original, an author of authentic power and grace.

Certainly there's nothing predictable about her. The problem at the core of her third novel, Song of Solomon, isn't the sort of problem you expect to encounter in books by women. It's the problem of manliness — what it is, how you achieve it, how it evades you. To this decidedly masculine issue Morrison brings a set of ideas, opinions and responses that make her novel important and surprising.

Her hero, Milkman Dead, is growing up absurd in the town of Mercy, Michigan. He's nicknamed Milkman because his overly affectionate mother nursed him 'till his legs were almost long enough to touch the floor. But that's not the worst of his problems.

His mother and father hate each other, and apparently always have. His father's sister is a bootlegger over on the other side of town and doesn't talk to his father. Milkman's older sisters are wan spinsters who resent him. Worst of all, his girlfiend, whom he has been trying to drop from his life, insists on attempting to murder him. The fact that she's his first cousin makes it even more complicated.

MORRISON
. . . folklore

Milkman's father is a rich, grim property owner, and Milkman, at age 30 or so, works for him as a kind of glorified office boy. He knows this isn't what he should be doing, but he can't think of anything else. He also senses that his relations with women aren't what they should be, but he can't imagine conducting his life any other way.

Toni Morrison's midwestern black community is as exotic as anything in Nabokov or Borges — though possibly her approach owes more to Faulkner. In any case, her characters live wildly vivid lives, charged with superstition. The events in their own pasts, and the pasts of their ancestors, echo through every day of their existence. Song of Solomon has something in common with Roots: Its central figure decides he must trace his origins.

Milkman's father's father was a farmer, murdered by white men for his land — a story that Milkman untangles bit by bit. And his great-grandfather, down in Virginia, was the hero of a local legend that had him flying off, all on his own, to return to Africa. Milkman's father and the bootlegger aunt, when they were children, seem to have killed a white man and then either taken or not taken his cache of gold. That gold becomes part of the fuel of the plot.

Toni Morrison, who is an editor at Random House as well as a novelist — her earlier books are The Bluest Eye (1970) and Sula (1973) — has a fine sense of language and the plotting ability of a master. She has a way of working into her story certain elements of folklore and mythology that heighten the effect of every passage.

Her women are well developed — Pilate, the bootlegger aunt, is a small masterpiece of characterization, a mixture of confidence and fear, and Milkman's mother is sketched in with a few careful strokes. One of the sisters has a speech to Milkman, describing her position in life, that says more about women's status than any dozen issues of Ms magazine.

But the men in the novel have the greatest impact. Sometimes Toni Morrison writes as well about men as Brian Moore does about women. Clearly she knows a great deal about why young men act the way they do, and specifically about the forces that play on young black men.

His father has clear advice on how to proceed. "Own things," he says. "And let the things you own own other things. Then you'll own yourself and other people too."

His best friend, Guitar, tells Milkman that everyone wants to take over the life of a black man. "White men want us dead or quiet — which is the same thing as dead." White women want black men quiet too, except perhaps in bed. As for black women, "they want your whole self. Love, they call it, and understanding. What they mean is, don't love anything on earth except me . . . Don't go anywhere where I ain't . . ."

Guitar has a different idea. He belongs to a secret vigilante group of black men who murder whites to avenge the killings of blacks. Guitar's violent solution to the problem of black manliness hangs over the whole novel like an evil cloud, the way mindless violence has always hung over the relations between whites and blacks.

Milkman affects to be bored by race relations, but in truth he is haunted by them. He affects to be controlling women, but in fact he is controlled by them. He affects to despise his materialistic father, but in fact he is turning into a replica of that same man. He's confused most of the way, but the book about him isn't confusing. Toni Morrison has a Dickensian gift of drawing us into every corner of her plot, no matter how unlikely the events we may find there. She takes us anywhere she wants us to go, and it usually turns out to be an exceptionally interesting destination.

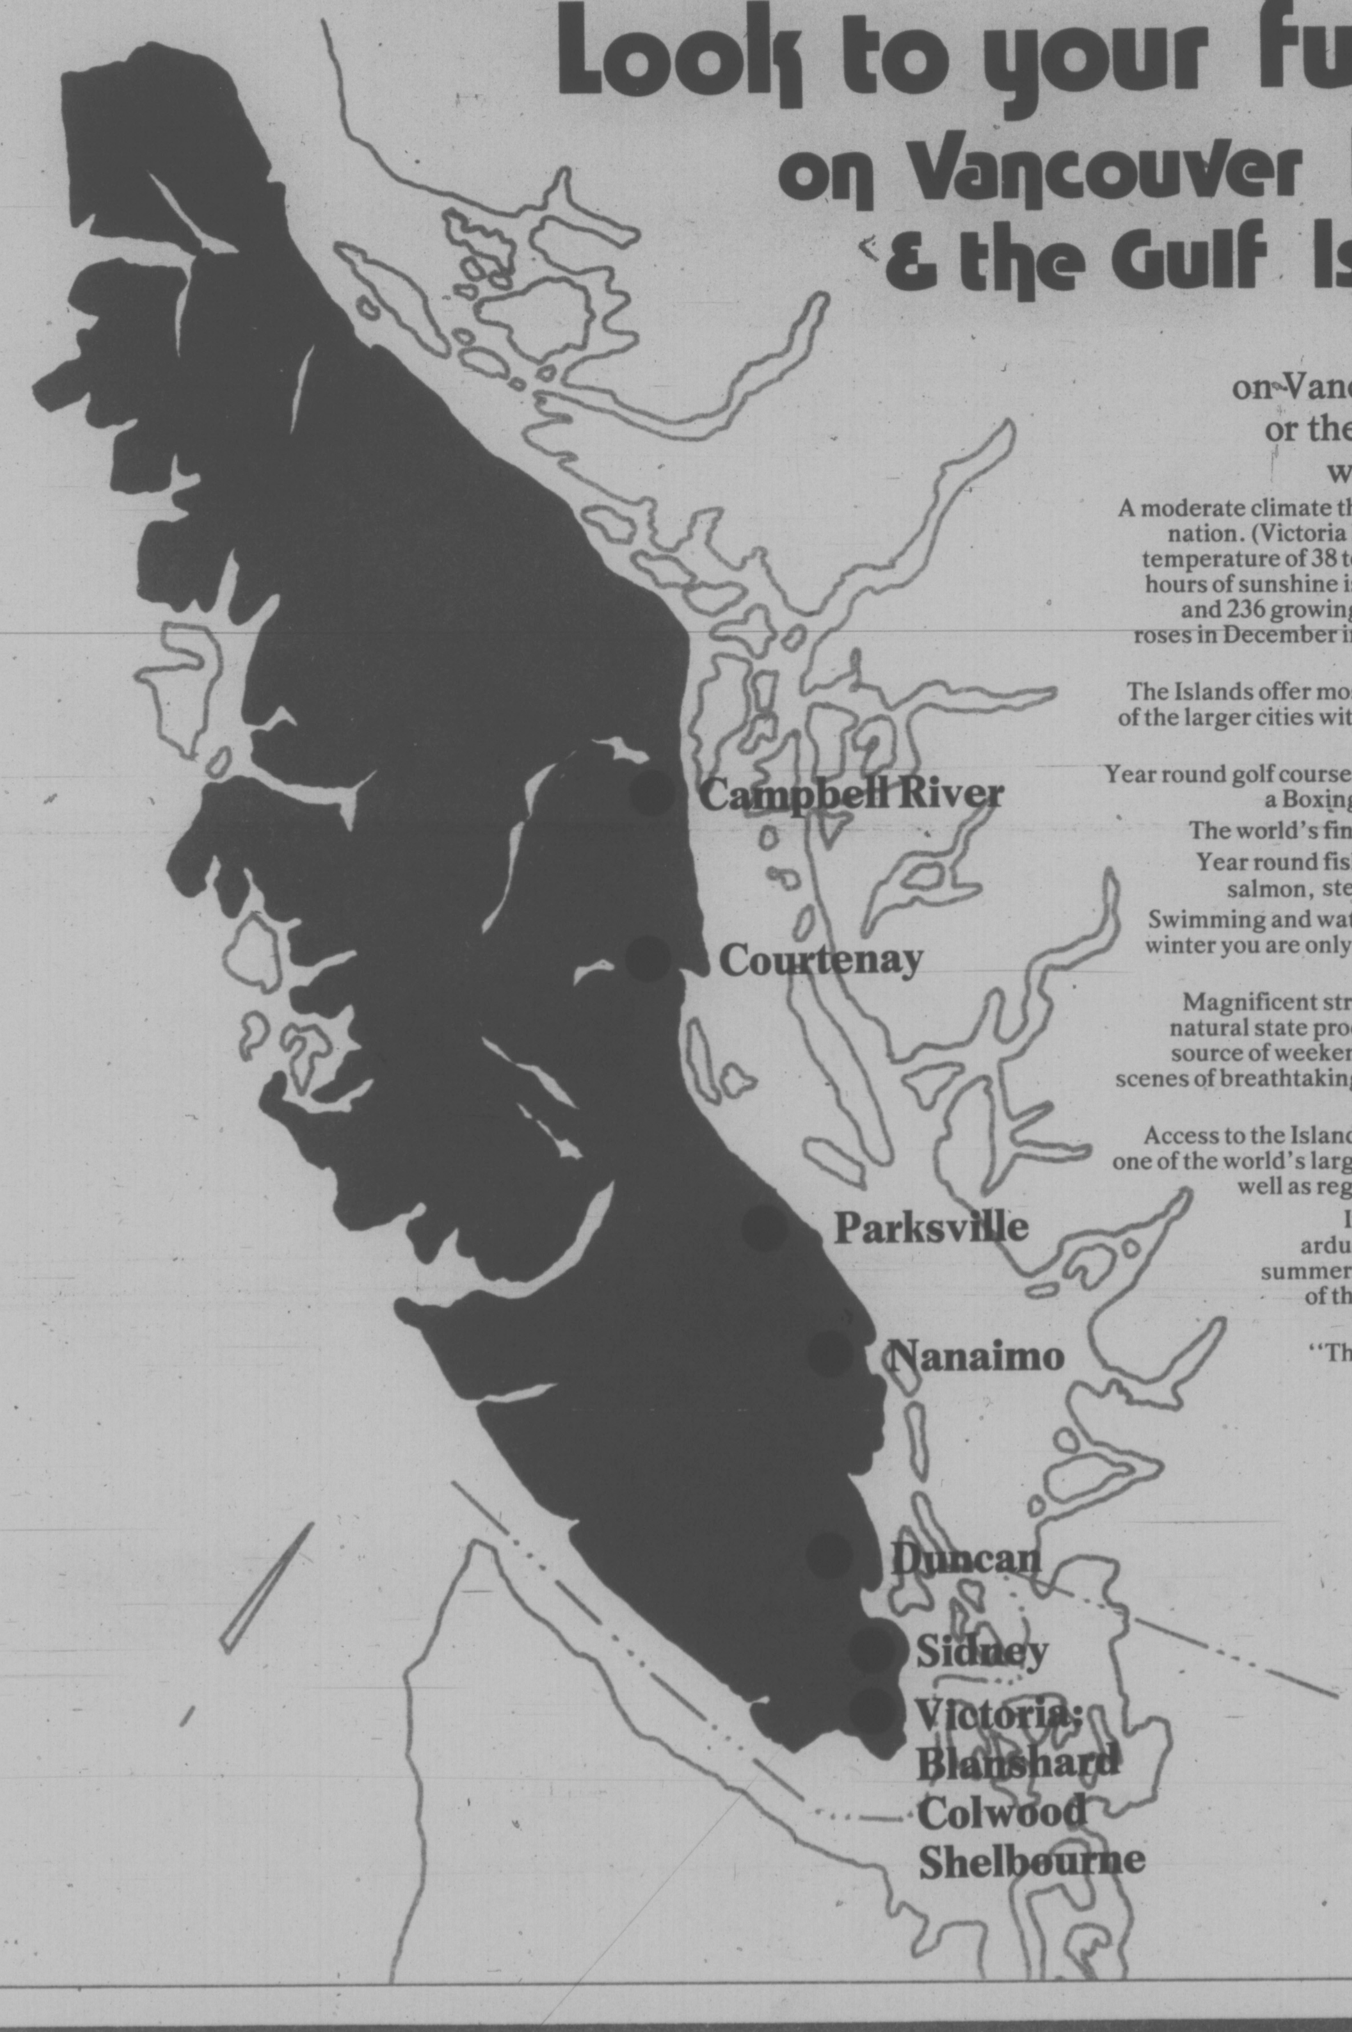
VANCOUVER ISLAND HOMES

As featured in the Block Bros. Catalog

Supplement to The Times Columnist, The Cowichan Pictorial, Arrowsmith Star, Comox District Free Press, Campbell River Mirror

Look to your future
on Vancouver Island & the Gulf Islands



Your future on Vancouver Island or the Gulf Islands would include:

A moderate climate that is the envy of the nation. (Victoria has a January mean temperature of 38 to 40 degrees.) 2,216 hours of sunshine is the yearly average and 236 growing days. You can pick roses in December instead of shovelling snow.

Year round golf courses. (Victoria features a Boxing Day Tournament.)

The world's finest cruising waters.

Swimming and water-skiing, yet in the winter you are only an hour or two from skiing.

Magnificent stretches of land in the natural state produce a never ending source of weekend explorations, and scenes of breathtaking beauty where land and sea meet.

If you want to escape arduous winters, stifling summers, and the pressures of the city...or if you just want to escape,

"There's a place for you on the Islands".

Home Trading

How can you possibly buy a home before you know that yours is safely sold?

On the other hand, how can you possibly sell your home before you know that you and your family have somewhere else to go?

Eighteen years ago, Block Bros. looked at this problem and came up with a unique solution: The HOME TRADE PLAN.

The idea of trading in one home for another seems to give some people the willies.

They think that maybe the agent will use the trade plan for profit that is rightfully the property owner's.

And here's how we'll do it.

You pick out the property you want to buy. We'll guarantee to purchase your house or other real estate at an agreed-upon price — in writing.

In addition, Block Bros. will give you an opportunity to sell at a higher price, through our coast-to-coast real estate catalog.

If you get a better offer than our guaranteed price, the benefit is totally yours, and further if we are required to take over ownership of your house, and later sell it for a higher price, we will rebate to you that amount less the cost of expenses we have incurred.

There is no extra charge, beyond normal commission, for this service.

If your property does not sell in the open market, Block Bros. will buy it.

You, on the other hand, have the satisfaction of knowing that you received fair market value.

The 'original' plan that lets buyers have the home they want. Today. You don't have to sell to buy when you use our Home Trading Plan. It's used by hundreds of home buyers every year. Just as a Block Bros. agent.

Introducing our Shelbourne Staff

Shelbourne Office is located in the heart of the metropolitan Victoria area. Ideally situated to provide easy access via intersecting main streets and roads. Shelbourne Street itself serves the bulk of the commuters from the "Gordon Head" residential university area, to the downtown business core.

The sales team consists of an excellent cross section of expertise and knowledge in (1) Residential, (2) Business and I.C. and I. type properties as well as (3) Farm and Land Holdings. The sales team has gained a reputation as one of the very top producers of the whole island, giving expert service. There is not a real estate situation we can't handle, working in conjunction with our 70 branch offices and many associate brokers. Offering one of the most moderate climates in all of Canada and with "sport fishing unlimited" the area has come to be the envy of thousands.

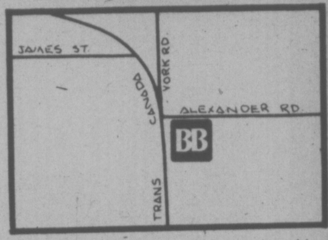
Duncan Homes

Introducing our Duncan Staff



One of Vancouver Island's most desirable locations is the Cowichan Valley. The Cowichan Valley extends for approximately 30 miles along the picturesque coastline south from Saanich Inlet, through Mill Bay, Cowichan Bay, Sansum Narrows, Maple Bay, and north to Stuart Channel.

Duncan, the hub city of the Cowichan Valley, is rapidly becoming the Sunshine Capital for recreation, commerce, and culture. Due to the abundance of nature's endowment of ocean, lakes, and mountains, and also due to the young attitude, this vibrant modern community is experiencing a growth rate of approximately 21%. The current population of the Cowichan Valley and electoral areas is 47,100 plus.

We, the Block Bros. salespeople in Duncan, service the complete areas of North Cowichan, Cowichan Lake, Youbou, Chemainus, Crofton, Maple Bay, Cowichan Bay, Cobble Hill, Mill Bay, Shawnigan Lake, and Saltspring Island.

It is our pledge to you to not only be the best, but to keep trying harder in order to be of better service to you. It would be neighbourly of you to visit, and I believe we could make your stay very enjoyable and memorable.

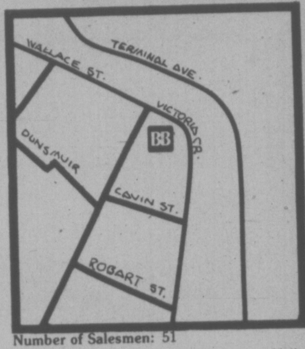
Nanaimo Homes

Introducing our Nanaimo Office



Number of Salesmen: 51

Areas serviced include: Ladysmith, Yellow Point, Cedar, Nanaimo City, and Lantzville

Approximate population of same: 47,000

NANAIMO OVERVIEW

1977 was a stable year in the housing market and the Nanaimo area remained attractive to developers and home buyers alike. If 1977 was a year of quiet optimism, 1978 should prove to be one of expansion. The official commencement of the Duke Point development by the British Columbia Development Corporation will undoubtedly play a major role. We believe that the sales activity recorded already in the new year confirms this felling of a healthy market place to come. As manager of the Nanaimo office, I would like to take this opportunity on behalf of myself and the salestaff to thank everyone in the area for their past business and look forward to many new acquaintances in 1978.

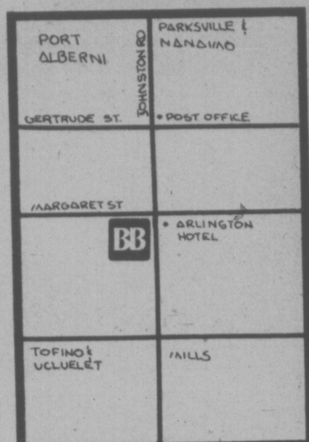
Parksville Homes

Introducing our Parksville-Qualicum Staff



Our catchment area is the whole of School District 69. And we offer a phenomenal variety of real estate from luxurious waterfront to the escape from civilization in the backwoods. The two Villages of Qualicum and Parksville are different and somewhat complementary to each other. They are a retirement haven and increasingly a dormitory suburb for Nanaimo and Port Alberni.

It is a tourist and retirement-based economy with fishing and logging as the other mainstays.
